Exemptions On Taxes Up

OTTAWA (CP) — Personal income tax exemptions for the 1977 tax year will rise by 8.6 per cent as the result of indexing to match increases in the cost of living, the finance department announced today.

For 1977, the basic personal exemption will rise to $2,270 from its 1976 level of $2,090 and the married exemption will go to $1,990 from $1,830 the department said in a news release.

Deductions for the aged and disabled will go to $1,420 from $1,310. Maximum exemptions for children under 16 will rise to $430 from $390 and four children 16 and over will go to $780 from $720.

The indexing plan was approved by Parliament in 1973 and allows increased exemptions and tax bracket limits to reflect changes in the government's consumer price index, the most frequently used measure of inflation.

The department said the changes will reduce federal revenues in 1977 by $950 million.

The 8.6-per-cent figure is based on increases in the average consumer price index for the 12-month period ending in September, 1976, above corresponding averages for the 12-month period ending in September, 1975.

The adjustment reflects inflation in the period before anti-inflation controls were introduced in October, 1975, the department said.

In the last several months, the 12-month inflation rate has been averaging about seven per cent, and September's consumer price index was 6.5 per cent above figures for September, 1975.

THIEU BUYS HOME IN U.K.

LONDON (TNS) — Nguyen Van Thieu, exiled former president of South Vietnam, has purchased a $65,000 home in New Malden, a fashionable suburb south of London, it was reported Friday.

Thieu has been living in Britain since last year after he went into exile in April, 1975, just before South Vietnam surrendered to the Communists. He has a 13-year-old son at Eton.

LEVESQUE VOW

Quebec Pullout If PQ Wins

MONTREAL (CP) — If a Parti Quebecois government is elected Nov. 15, it would move within two years to take Quebec out of Confederation, party leader Rene Levesque said in an interview Thursday.

The first step would be to ask Ottawa to hand over the powers that would make Quebec a sovereign state. The request would be followed by a referendum.

Levesque, 54, who quit the Liberal party a decade ago to fight for independence, has played down the issue in the current campaign. Instead he has attacked the record of Premier Robert Bourassa's government and promised a more efficient administration. But, he says, the Parti Quebecois remains an independence party.

If elected, it would consider that voters had given it a mandate to begin negotiations with Ottawa to separate from Canada.

He added that the party had also made a commitment not to push Quebecers into independence against their will.

The party would function as a normal provincial government while drafting a law that would set the rules of a referendum, which would have a single clearly-understandable question.

Victory in a referendum would require Canada, under the terms of the Helsinki declaration, to negotiate the province's departure from Confederation. The Helsinki declaration states that all peoples have the right to determine their internal and external political status.

If Ottawa agreed to negotiate, Quebecers might have to be polled several times through referendums on various issues. The process would take several years because billions in assets and liabilities would be involved.

The rights of the English-speaking minority would be entrenched by a separate Quebec, Levesque said. They would be guaranteed rights to tax-supported schools and would be treated "like everyone else."

All new immigrants, "whether they are from Sydney, N.S., or Sydney, Australia" would have to attend French-language schools while awaiting citizen status.

Levesque said independence is inevitable because it is rooted "in people's consciousness."

"When Trudeau says 'separatism is dead' he is wrong. It is a permanent feeling because it is tied to economic facts and a growing discontent with political institutions."

A United States economist said Thursday in Sherbrooke, 90 miles east of Montreal, that Quebec's economy would not be seriously harmed if the province became independent.

Dr. Ronald Muller, an economics professor from the American University, Washington D.C., said: "I do not believe that Quebec would suffer serious economic reprisals if it secedes because its vast natural wealth would attract any foreign investor."

He was speaking at the International Council on Regional Economics here, in its fourth day.

He likened the Quebec economy and its problems to those of Peru. Both regions have a wealth of natural resources, both are geographically well spread out and both are heavily dependent on multinational companies for the exploitation

BNA VETO FEARED

Giving any province a veto on future constitutional change won't unite — and it could break up — Canada, former defence minister James Richardson said in Victoria today.

"The Canada I believe in has a limitless destiny and in my Canada there is an open-hearted and welcome place for Quebec as a great province of Canada," he told members of the Men's Canadian Club in a lunchtime speech.

But what Canada will be allowed to become in future depends on two critical questions: what's in a patriated constitution and what the rules are for changing the constitution, he said.

Richardson, Liberal MP for Winnipeg South, resigned from the Trudeau cabinet last month because he is opposed to the amending formula Ottawa will argue for at a meeting of first ministers next month.

His speech in Victoria today is the first on a national tour which will see him speaking in all 10 provinces over the next month.

At the constitutional conference in Victoria five years ago the federal government first proposed a constitutional amending formula which would give the veto to:

—any province which at any time had had a population of at least 25 per cent of the national population.

—at least two of the Atlantic provinces.

—at least two of the western provinces which had a current combined population of at least half that of all western provinces.

That's still the formula favored by Ottawa and one he opposes for the most fundamental reason, Richardson said.

The formula gives a veto to both Quebec and Ontario in perpetuity.

"Making one of the parts equal to the whole is wrong," he said.

"It is important for Canadians to realize that a veto can prevent something from being taken out of the constitution, but in future years a veto can also prevent something being added to the constitution.

"We must ask if it is really our intention to establish an amending formula under which nine provinces of Canada and a vast majority of Canadians might wish to add to Canada's constitution but

Ethics Rules Pledged

Times News Services

OTTAWA — The government is planning to introduce as soon as possible legislation setting out conflict-of-interest rules for MPs and senators, acting prime minister Allan MacEachen said Thursday.

MacEachen told the Commons that while it was a "matter of urgency" he could not guarantee to present the bill before Christmas as demanded by some members of the opposition.

He told New Democratic Party leader Ed Broadbent the legislation would likely be called the "independence of Parliament Act."

MacEachen, who is also the Liberal House leader, said the government was not studying reports on conflict-of-interest from both the House and the Senate.

The 15-month-old reports are based on the government's green paper on conflict of interest presented in 1973 by MacEachen.

The conflict-of-interest issue has raged through the Commons all week, following disclosures that Conservative MP Peter Bawden (Calgary South) has cashed in on business deals with the Liberal government since his election in 1972. Recently, he sold a $120,000 aircraft to the RCMP through a company he owns, Enden Ltd.

Callaghan Won't Quit Despite Blow at Polls

LONDON (Reuter) — British Prime Minister James Callaghan declared today that his Labor government will carry on despite a hammering in three parliamentary by-elections.

The voters swung decisively toward the Conservatives, defeating Labor in two of the three seats, all in working class areas regarded as solid Labor strongholds. Labor's effective parliamentary majority was cut to one from two.

But Callaghan said in a statement that the results would "in no way affect the government's determination to pursue the task of national recovery."

"Britain needs a sustained effort and the government will not be deterred by the temporary setback. . . . We intend to carry on with our economic and legislative program."

He said rebuilding Britain's industrial system would be difficult but with Labor's cooperation with the trade unions the country had its greatest chance in a generation to break out of decades of decline.

In Walsall, the Conservatives turned a more than 16,000 vote deficit in the 1974 general election into a 4,379 majority — a swing of 22.5 per cent.

They swung 13 per cent to capture the seat at Workington, but failed to draw the needed 27 per cent to take the seat at Newcastle.

Rodriguez Guilty Of Murder

NANAIMO (CP) — A British Columbia Supreme Court jury found James Rodriguez Melendez, 25, guilty Thursday of murder in the death of Pamela Jones, 22, and guilty of manslaughter in the death of James Oldfield, 29. Both were fatally shot Oct. 24, 1975.

The jury of eight men and four women deliberated 7½ hours before reaching a verdict and recommending early parole.

Mr. Justice John Aiken sentenced Rodriguez to life imprisonment on the murder conviction and eight years concurrent for manslaughter. The jury recommended that Rodriguez be eligible for parole in 10 years.

The sentencing concluded the 23-day trial in which 36 witnesses were heard and about 150 exhibits were entered.

Jones, Oldfield and Rodriguez shared a house three miles from Duncan at the time of the murders.

From early November of 1975, Rodriguez was sought by police in connection with the disappearance of Jones and Oldfield. Their badly-decomposed bodies were found Nov. 7 near a garbage dump. About the same time, Oldfield's abandoned pick-up truck and dismantled parts of two rifles were found.

JOBLESS UP

WASHINGTON (AP) — The unemployment rate in the United States rose to 7.9 per cent in October from 7.8 per cent the previous month, the government said today. The figures provided fresh evidence that the U.S. economic slowdown is continuing.

FLYING OTTO COST $740,000

OTTAWA (CP) — Transport Minister Otto Lang, a forceful advocate of the user-pay concept to eliminate travel subsidies, has spent more than $740,000 worth of tax money on government flights since 1973.

Many of the flights on transport department airplanes were to his home riding of Saskatoon-Humboldt in Saskatchewan.

In a written Commons reply to Conservative Tom Cossitt (Leeds), Lang's parliamentary secretary Marcel Roy said Thursday that all the minister's flights "were for official government business."

That reply, Cossitt said in a statement, is ridiculous. The flights to Saskatoon obviously were not on government business.

Although Lang first started using government airplanes when he joined the cabinet in 1968, Roy said there are no records of Lang flights up to April, 1973.

Since then, the minister has taken 133 flights for a total cost of $742,829.

Information tabled by Roy shows that Lang usually takes a government Jetstar — a small four-engine jet with eight plush seats and a steward — when he travels.

Taking the government plane from Ottawa to Saskatoon costs about $7,000, round trip. Regular Air Canada economy fare to Saskatoon is $274, round trip. First class is $412, plus an $8 airport tax.

Rhodesia Talks Bog Down Over Majority-Rule Date

Times News Services

GENEVA — The Rhodesia conference bogged down today in a total black-white impasse over setting a firm date for majority rule and conference sources said Prime Minister Ian Smith is expected to return to the talks shortly.

The rival black and white delegations met today in full session but failed to set a date for independence under majority rule and the conference adjourned without another meeting being arranged.

Ivor Richard, the British chairman, proposed March 1, 1978, as the date but this was rejected by both sides — the black nationalists saying it was too far away and the white government insisting it would be too soon.

Conference officials said Smith, who quit the conference Wednesday complaining he had done nothing but "twiddle my thumbs," may return within one week.

Richard scheduled a weekend of private bilateral consultations with the various delegation leaders after he failed today to get everyone to agree on an independence date.

Smith made it clear in a Salisbury news conference today the system he envisages under a majority rule constitution excludes suffrage on a one-man, one-vote basis.

"I go along with African majority rule according to my definition because I'm an African the same as the majority of whites who live in this part of the world. I am not prepared to give consideration to future constitutions for Rhodesia on a basis of color.

"Once we get to a stage where we are determining people's right to govern purely on the color of their skin as opposed to their efficiency, then I believe that will be a sad day for Rhodesia and I will continue to resist that."

In Ottawa, Shridath Ramphal, Commonwealth secretary-general, warned Thursday that political leaders, including U.S. president-elect Jimmy Carter, should brace themselves for a major migration of white Rhodesians.

Ramphal said that almost half of Rhodesia's 270,000 whites went there since the unilateral declaration of independence 11 years ago.

Auto Crashes Up: MVB

Motor vehicle branch statistics show a four per cent increase in auto accidents in B.C. for the first five months of this year, contrary to statements made over the past few months by Premier Bill Bennett and Pat McGeer.

The statistics, released Thursday, cover the period from Jan. 1 to May 31, and show there were 32,338 accidents in B.C., an increase of 2,647 over the same period in 1975. The total number of vehicles involved in accidents was 54,762, an increase of five per cent from 1975.

Both McGeer, minister responsible for the Insurance Corporation of B.C., and the premier have said several times that accidents are down this year, and indicated the ICBC rate increases last winter are responsible for the decrease because motorists are more cautious.

A spokesman in McGeer's office says the two versions of the figures are not imcompatible.

The branch statistics are probably correct, the spokesman said, but the minister has been basing his statements on statistics obtained from police in sample areas of the province. The minister's figures are more recent, the spokesman said, and cover the period through the end of September.

The figures continue to show a decreasing number of accidents, he said.

The MVB statistics show the number of fatalities has decreased by five per cent — 214 deaths compared with 226 a year ago. The number of accidents causing deaths is down 7 per cent, to 177 from 192.

The number of accidents involving only property damage is up nine per cent in the first five months of the year and the total property damage is 12 per cent more in that period than in 1975.

Police Spying on Civilians—Magazine

NEW YORK (UPI) — Several hundred police agencies in the United States and Canada are members of a clandestine organization spying on civilians and are operating outside any government authority, according to Penthouse magazine.

The December issue of the periodical, in an article by George O'Toole, identified the alleged network as the Law Enforcement Intelligence Unit (LEIU), "so secret that few people even know it exists and so powerful that it does as it pleases while answering to no one."

Penthouse described O'Toole as a former chief of the problem analysis branch of the CIA.

O'Toole said that more than 225 law enforcement agencies in both countries held membership in the LEIU and claimed that "some of its principal members have moved away from its stated original aim of combatting organized crime and into the area of spying on civilians."

The only Canadian province listed in a lengthy 10-page handout from penthouse was Ontario. The article said:

"In Ontario, Canada, membership was held by the Canada department of Manpower and immigration, the Niagara regional police force, the Ontario Provincial Police, the Toronto metropolitan police department and the Windsor city police department."

The article said the group was founded in California in 1957 and included the police departments of major cities on the west coast. Since then it has spread to police departments in a majority of big U.S. cities, the article said.

O'Toole said a "significant" number of state police agencies also had connections to the LEIU. He named some 30 state groups which he said had ties to the LEIU.

The organizer of LEIU, according to the article, was a Los Angeles police official, no longer on the force, who wanted to take police intelligence away from the FBI.

SNOWBALLS NOT ICY

LONDON (CP) — Canadian Eskimos are eating a lot of snowballs, but they are confectionery, not ice cream.

Agence France Press reported Thursday that a Scottish company, John J. Lees Ltd. of Coatbridge, is shipping 60 tons of snowball ice cream to Labrador Eskimos.

Lees' managing director Andrew Sim explained today that the confectionery, made of marshmallow covered in chocolate and coconut is popular in Canada and in the last six weeks about 100 tons have been shipped across the Atlantic.

Deputy Premier Resigns

Fukuda, 71, already nominated by two-thirds of the governing Liberal Democratic party as their candidate for the premiership, has been a leading figure in the campaign to topple Miki.

Miki has been under fire for six months for alleged weak leadership and his handling of the Lockheed bribes scandal, which has reached high into the Japanese establishment.

and export of their natural wealth.

"If Quebec hopes to develop an autonomous economy it must learn to use and control the international markets," he said.

Muller suggested that Quebec should concentrate on exports. Its natural wealth would give it tremendous bargaining power.

"If Canadian and American firms are unco-operative, then let them leave and make way for other investors," Muller said.

Finance Minister Raymond Garneau, meanwhile, rejected as a "warmed-over pseudo-scandal" allegations that he and another influential Liberal, Paul Desrochers, set up a patronage system involving the Quebec Liquor Corp. in 1970.

Both he and Bourassa suggested Thursday that the report in Le Devoir was planted by the Parti Quebecois. Bourassa said two civil servants had been charged as a result of an investigation.

However, Le Devoir said today that only two of the six persons mentioned in the Quebec Crime Commission report have been charged and the charges were placed seven months after the government was handed the report in July, 1975.

No action had been taken against the other four for alleged patronage although the commission had listed "grave irregularities" under that heading and said it opened the way for organized crime to infiltrate government.

the weather

The weather system lying across central Vancouver Island and extending over southern B.C. is continuing gradually southward. Skies are mainly cloudy over most of the coast while variable amounts of cloud are reported over the interior. At the same time, precipitation is occurring over portions of Vancouver Island and the lower mainland while in the interior precipitation is reported at a few localities, including areas in the Cariboo and at Kamloops. This precipitation will let up on the south coast by afternoon followed by afternoon sunny periods. Over the interior, a few showers will persist into the afternoon. Today and Saturday, a series of systems approaching from the Pacific will be responsible for precipitation over north coast regions. An improving trend is forecast for the remainder of the province on Saturday.

Callaghan Won't Call Election

Labor won this with 47 per cent of the vote and the Conservatives were knocked back into third position by the small Liberal party, which gained 29 per cent compared with the Conservatives' 19 per cent.

Following the byelection results, Labor and its allies hold 316 seats in the House of Commons. The combined opposition holds 315, giving the Labor side a majority of one.

Meanwhile, Britons braced for a new bout of austerity this week as a team of high-powered international bank examiners arrived to see if the country is credit worthy.

The team from the International Monetary Fund will bargain with Denis Healey, the chancellor of the exchequer, over the strings attached to a $3.9 billion loan the fund is virtually certain to approve.

The big question is how tight or loose the strings will be. On the eve of this week's visit, Healey made some moves of his own to insure that the terms are politically bearable. He told back bench Labor members of Parliament he is considering fresh cuts in government spending or some new taxes to hold down the budget deficit.

This is precisely the anti-inflation medicine prescribed by IMF officials and their mentors in Washington and Bonn, West Germany.

The pound maintained its recovery on foreign exchanges today, with returning confidence apparently helped by expectations that the British government will make some further public spending cuts.

The Labor party government's loss of two byelections, reducing its over-all parliamentary majority to one, was seen as helping the pound by dealing a blow to the party's left wing.

In early dealings today, the British currency put on almost 1.5 cents to touch $1.64 U.S. The pound climbed back this week from levels well below the $1.60 mark.

Jobless Rate Seen Misleading

MONTREAL (CP) — The employment rate would perhaps give a better perspective on the labor market than the unemployment rate, the Bank of Montreal suggests in its November business review.

The bank said that although there has been an economic recovery in Canada this year, unemployment has remained above seven per cent, reaching 7.3 per cent in September, the latest month for which figures are available.

However, the bank said the economy is operating much closer to full employment levels than unemployment figures indicate.

It explained that liberalized unemployment insurance regulations and greater participation by women and young people were a factor in the high jobless rate.

An Economic Council of Canada study estimated that improved unemployment insurance benefits added about 1.1 per cent to the jobless rolls, the bank said and indicated that participation by women added another 0.5 per cent.

BNA Veto Feared

would be prevented from doing so by the veto of one province.

"I believe that Canada cannot achieve her destiny under that kind of rigid and undemocratic amending formula."

The formula would mean that Ontario and Quebec would retain the veto as long as they wanted.

"The ultimate rigidity is that the veto protects the veto. Think about it," Richardson said.

"This kind of rigidity — this kind of control over the future of Canada by a single province is not right, it is not acceptable; it is not democratic and it must not be allowed to happen.

"The central issue is that control over the amending of the constitution of Canada must be held by all Canadians and not by one of the provinces of Canada. No federal state in the world gives the same power of veto to one of its parts as is given to the nation itself."

Richardson said what is needed is an amending procedure that is national in scope, providing enough flexibility to let Canada adjust and grow in changing circumstances and reflect the wishes of the majority.

"This could be done by a national referendum, as it is in some other countries, or it could be achieved by the agreement of some number of provinces containing at least 60 per cent of the population of Canada.

"I have suggested six provinces, but others believe that the agreement of seven, or even eight, should be required."

On language rights, Richardson said he is not opposed to them. But people must understand that if Quebec has a veto, any language rights entrenched in the constitution can't be changed in future without the consent of Quebec.

"I believe that when the full implications are explained, most Canadians will agree that it would not be wise for Canada to entrench additional language rights in the constitution, particularly at the present time when we are still experiencing serious difficulty in implementing the bilingual program."

He said concerned people in B.C. should tell Premier Bennett to be careful not to agree to any constitutional amending formula which will tie the hands of future generations of Canadians.

Car Workers Strike Early

Times News Services

Several thousand Chrysler Corp. workers in Detroit and Windsor, ignored a 6 p.m. EST strike deadline and walked off the job today as bargainers struggled to reach agreement on a new contract with the United Auto Workers (UAW).

An estimated 9,000 workers were either on strike or sent home because of the unauthorized work stoppage, a company spokesman said.

Chrysler officials said about 4,000 workers at the Windsor car assembly and engine plants did not return from their lunch break, forcing immediate shutdown of those two facilities.

The spokesman also said an undetermined number of workers in the cushion shop of the huge Hamtrack assembly plant in Detroit staged an unauthorized strike this morning. Shortly afterwards, workers in the paint shop walked out.

The company said it was forced to shut down all plant operations because of the action and send some 5,000 dayshift employees home.

In Toronto, negotiations for Ford Motor Co. of Canada Ltd. and the UAW reached a tentative agreement Thursday that both sides expect will end a strike by 14,500 Ford workers in southwestern Ontario.

Company spokesman Tony Fredo said the settlement was based on a three-year contract negotiated last month after a strike by Ford workers in the United States.

The Canadian agreement provides a first-year general increase of 20 cents an hour and an annual increase of three per cent for an average of more than 37 cents an hour.

Fredo said workers will probably be back on the job Monday if union locals ratify the settlement during the weekend.

MID-ATLANTIC RESCUE

CAPE TOWN, South Africa (AP) — The captain of the Windsor Castle says Marg Fuller survived three hours in the sea by floating on her back and occasionally swimming breaststroke after she fell off the ship.

Mrs. Fuller, 64, swam for three hours about 250 miles off the coast of Angola as the Windsor Castle sailed for Cape Town from Britain.

Captain Patrick St. Quentin Bealon said: "When we turned round to go back to search for her I thought it unlikely we would find her. But we are obliged to turn back because there is always a chance.

"It is hard to expect anybody to stay afloat in a sea of that temperature—it was about 18 degrees Celsius."

He said the sea was running only a moderate swell with an occasional wave. The wind was force four.

Crew members who rescued her in a lifeboat said they thought they had sighted a shark only a short distance from Mrs. Fuller.

Mrs. Fuller was in the sick bay of the Windsor Castle today, now docked in Cape Town harbor. She is out of danger but under sedation.

Her husband, Leslie Fuller, who watched from the deck as his wife was dragged to safety, said: "It is a miracle she is alive. Pray God she will be all right."

Mrs. Fuller fell overboard from the ships deck Monday morning. She was wearing a dressing gown.

Her husband noticed she was missing and at 9:15 it was announced the vessel would be turning around to search for her.

About 10:30, the second officer spotted Mrs. Fuller.

A lifeboat was lowered and Mrs. Fuller was thrown a life jacket and the lifeline and was pulled on to the boat.

Canadian, U.S. Fish Lines Cross

NEAT FEAT displayed by physical education instructor Robin Fry at the University of Lethbridge is a size six (foot) running shoe, designed for Peter Pronghorn, a papier mache antelope used as a mascot in the university's basketball games.

OTTAWA (CP) — The United States government does not accept all of the boundaries Canada has drawn up for its 200-mile fisheries zone, the U.S. Embassy here said Thursday.

The embassy said in a statement that the U.S. government published in Washington the co-ordinates of its own 200-mile zone.

There are overlaps in several areas with the Canadian boundaries published Tuesday.

However officials from the two countries have been negotiating the boundary situation for a couple of months and the U.S. announcemnt was hardly a surprise.

Canadian officials have said that an interim arrangement is being discussed to govern fishing in boundary waters while a final agreement is worked out. That is expected to take well into next year.

The two governments disagree on boundaries for four areas — Georges Bank off southern Nova Scotia, Juan de Fuca Strait off Vancouver Island, the Dixon Entrance between British Columbia and the Alaskan Panhandle and between the Yukon Territorcy and Alaskan borders.

That last area will come into focus March 1 when Canada will proclaim a 200-mile fisheries zone for the Arctic, the same day the U.S. limit comes into effect.

A U.S. state department official said arbitration could be conducted by a third country or by the International Court of Justice.

A formal statement issued at a state department briefing added:

"The two governments will meet to consider third party procedures if the negotiations do not make progress."

The statement said both countries recognize that publication of thier boudary claims will not prejudice the negotiations.

B.C. Outlook Rosy

Economic output in British Columbia will rise a substantial six per cent this year, above the national average, and continue at five per cent next year, the Conference Board in Canada said Thursday.

Rapid 1976 growth will be in forestry, fishing, and manufacturing sectors, but the conference board also warned that increases in the labor force will mean an average nine per cent jobless rate this year, falling slightly to 8.5 in 1977.

The board, a private agency including corporate, labor and government representatives said in its latest forecast the pattern of economic growth among the provinces varies considerably.

The board predicts a national economic growth rate of 4.4 per cent in 1977. In 1975, the economy grew marginally by two-tenths of one per cent.

During 1976, the board predicts a growth rate of seven per cent for Alberta and 6.6 per cent for Saskatchewan but forecasts that the 1977 rates will fall to 5.2 per cent and three per cent respectively.

PENSION FROM BEATING

VANCOUVER (CP) — A woman who suffered permanent brain damage in an attack by her husband in March, 1975, has been awarded a lifetime pension of $345 a month under British Columbia's Criminal Injuries Compensation Act.

The award to Cora Paton Eichman, formerly an associate professor of education at the University of B.C., included a lump-sum payment of $7,500 and is the maximum allowed under the act.

Her husband, Charles Eichman of Tallahassee, Fla., is serving a 10-year prison sentence for attempted murder.

A B.C. Supreme Court jury, which convicted Eichman last June, heard evidence that he waited in the shadows of the parking garage beneath Mrs. Eichman's apartment and then bludgeoned her with a length of pipe.

Testimony revealed Mrs. Eichman suffered a depressed skull fracture and now is confined to a nursing home where she will require lifelong care.

An Outsider Takes Office

Even for non-voting bystanders, American elections are endlessly fascinating. Not because a change in the White House will probably mean much one way or another in U.S.-Canada relations — although the defeat of senators Vance Hartke of Indiana (staunch opponent of the Autopact) and James Buckley of New York (who pushed for retaliatory measures against our border television advertising ban) will be welcomed in Ottawa.

It is the fascination of the world's most powerful nation going to the polls 80 million strong to choose a president, vice-president, senators, congressmen and lesser state and local office-holders, to decide numerous referenda (there were 20 propositions on the ballot in California alone) bond issues and constitutional amendments. Together, it forms an immensely complicated, arcane and sometimes antiquated system that comes together every four years and, despite its periodic crises, still works. Probably nowhere else would or could such a system endure for long, or would the citizenry stand for an election campaign that demands one's undivided attention starting at least 18 months before the first Tuesday in November each leap year. America seems to thrive on its diet of argumentation, analysis and unceasing politicking.

About the winner who struggled triumphant this week out of the maze, it is a truism to say that nobody knows the "real" man. As far as a mass electorate can be said to "know" any politician (who in Canada knows Pierre Trudeau, for example?), Americans know their new president as an outsider.

Oddly this strength of Jimmy as a candidate throughout the gruelling selection process Americans have devised for themselves, is now a weakness in James Earl Carter, president. Americans all summer made it clear they were fed up with the traditional politicians and the traditional promises. Carter offered a new face, an unknown quantity but one which projected honesty, sincerity, concern for human suffering. Above all, he was completely unconnected with Washington, D.C.

(Closer to home, the election of rank outsiders like Samuel Hayakawa as senator in California and Dixie Lee Ray as governor of Washington state surely proves that Americans are fed up with the politicians and the politics they have and are willing to try anyone who seems different.)

He made George Wallace's anti-bureaucracy, anti-government attitude respectable. Carter captured the nomination of the Democratic party on his own; only as the bandwagon began to roll did the party bosses like Mayor Richard J. Daley of Chicago and AFL-CIO chief George Meany scramble aboard. Carter was beholden to no one but "the people."

He was elected on his own strengths and weaknesses. He owes nobody anything, and conversely, nobody owes him a thing either. It could make for chilly relations with the U.S. congress, even though it is overwhelmingly Democratic. The finely balanced American system rewards those skilled at negotiating, at trading off less objectionable evils for more desireable good.

A man with Carter's singleminded, ruthless political bent is not going to find it easy. A man with Carter's hefty list of political promises is going to find it even harder. A man who invites a baldfaced comparison with George Washington, promising never to tell a lie, is going to be ground exceedingly hard between the millstones of what is exceedingly attractive and what is financially possible, if he cannot deliver his national medicare plan, his radical tax reforms, his sweeping governmental reorganization and implicit reduction of the number of civil servants, his simultaneous reduction of unemployment and inflation.

It's going to be an epic struggle for Americans to participate in, and for the rest of the world to watch.

FRANK RUTTER

Carter's Still an Enigma

WASHINGTON — Mister Outside is going to be on the inside, like it or not, and the first crucial test of Jimmy Carter as U.S. president will be how he adjusts.

Carter, at the outset, was an anti-Washington candidate. It was only when he tried to act like a Washington politician that his campaign ran into trouble. He abandoned the attempt. Carter doesn't know congress very well and it doesn't know him. But their relationship will be vital. It will set the tone of the new administration.

Probably the first move will be a tax cut, primarily to help those on lower incomes, but also to stimulate industrial expansion. The problem will be to avoid overloading the budget with new spending programs. Carter is stuck with the Ford administration deficit budget which will carry over into next year. There is little he can do until 1978, where his balancing act will be crucial.

Congress Crucial

The danger of the congressional side is that too much enthusiasm by the strong Democratic majority will present Carter with legislation he would really prefer to veto — or risk bigger deficits. The problem on his side will be to establish an amicable working relationship in which he can promote his ideas.

Carter will bring excellent technical equipment to his job — a quick mind, a calculating intelligence and an ability to absorb and store information.

But he will also bring a reputation as a loner, whose decisions have been made within a tight circle of close advisers and who has tended to display impatience and sometimes coldness toward those with whom he disagreed.

No one really knows how, precisely, he will move to warm but not overheat the economy; to create jobs and moderate prices and to implement new programs such as national health insurance.

Compounding his economic problems is a volatile energy situation, in which increasing dependence on oil imports and anticipated Arab price increases threaten further dislocation in the absence of a coherent U.S. policy.

While Carter's preoccupation will be with domestic problems, he may not be allowed much diversion from international issues. He can expect an early test from the Russians on his seemingly contradictory proposals for a tougher line on detente and non-intervention abroad.

He will be unable to neglect the U.S. role in seeking a settlement leading to majority rule in Southern Africa.

It was significant that as the presidential campaign drew to a close, Carter became more and more cautious about making promises or elaborating on proposals.

While his victory reflects a desire for change, it is not a very emphatic desire. Carter did not succeed in completely capturing the hearts of members of his own party, let alone the electorate as a whole.

Despite his claim to have brought Georgia to heel during a single term as governor, Carter is not an experienced administrator. During his campaign he tended to juggle regional interests by blurring his intentions. That won't be possible in Washington.

But he has demonstrated two qualities during his remarkable ascent from obscurity to the presidency — an ability to sense the emotions of the people and to play upon them; and an ability to draw up a plan and stick to it, as he did in meticulously charting his route to the White House.

Wait for Jan. 20

These qualities will be useful. But Carter still has to prove that he has a pragmatic streak and an ability to compromise, in order to solve the problems he can diagnose with such accuracy.

It was doubt about this, once the emotional jog was over, that almost cost him the election. Trust was the factor, the unknown, in Carter's make up.

There is one piece of evidence worth examining, because it is the only clue to how Carter acts once he has achieved public office. When he was elected governor of Georgia, his constitutents were startled and amazed by an overnight transformation from apparent country bumpkin to sophisticated manager, from apparent redneck to advocate of desegregation.

Bats in the Belfry

Although the old Emmanuel Baptist church at 1291 Gladstone Avenue was desanctified it is still serving Victoria's spiritual needs in its new guise as the Belfry. In the past year more than 16,000 people have been entertained and informed by Theatre Passe Muraille, Codco, the Mummers and a host of other Canadian productions. Bastion Theatre Company, the Victoria Conservatory of Music and the British Columbia Drama Association have also found space in the Belfry.

None of these groups pays for the space. It is the only place in Victoria now that provides a setting for local poets, drama groups and other creative or experimental endeavors that cannot find space in expensive commercial outlets. It also affords glimpses of new ideas from other parts of the country that would be otherwise denied local audiences. Like any such endeavor, the Belfry has its share of bats, in the form of financial troubles. The largest bat is the loss of a Local Initiatives Program grant to cover operating costs. Without this government patronage the Belfry will close shortly. It needs $30,000 to ensure another year's operation. At present the directors are limping along on about $100 per month from accumulated funds.

Had the Belfry not lost its LIP grant — through some bureaucratic insensitivity thousands of miles from this community — there was a good chance it could have survived and prospered in the next few months through increased audiences and new demands for space. It is also interesting to note that no Victoria cultural endeavor received any LIP money this year.

The Belfry's directors are currently appealing the LIP cutoff and should be given every assistance from local people who have enjoyed its presentations. Past performance demands that Ottawa have a second look at this worthwhile creative project. Given time and a little help from the federal government, not to mention the Canada Council and the B.C. cultural fund, the bats would be exorcized and the Belfry could ring with the efforts of creative minds.

'Narrow' Decision

For some years we have watched the growth of the department of music at the University of Victoria with interest and not entirely without prejudice, since the three of us used to teach at rival institutions in the Lower Mainland. It is clear, however, that the development of the department since 1967 has been orderly and based on a solid foundation, and that its programs offer a good alternative to those of UBC and the Vancouver Community College.

It is also clear that academic colleagues at the University of Victoria consider the department a good investment in the future of British Columbia, for they have accorded it the first priority for a new building on the campus.

We write to ask your readers to encourage government members to reconsider their recent announcement (as we understand it) that the "proliferation of fine arts programs in the provincial universities" do not justify funding at this time for a new music building at the University of Victoria. By comparison with B.C.'s two, nine Ontario universities offer degree programs in music to a population only three times as large, and our graduates have no problems finding employment. There is at present no unnecessary duplication in university music in B.C.

In many ways, education, broadcasting, publication and general cultural awareness of being Canadian, our country, including the republic of British Columbia we love so much, is on the threshold of great new adventures in which politicians must take the broad view. The decision against the University of Victoria music department's new building seems to be a narrow political one which deserves the famous "second look" of the days of Bennett the elder. — Terence Bailey, Chairman, Department of Music History; Robert Creech, Chairman, Department of Applied Music; Hugh J. McLean, Dean, Faculty of Music; University of Western Ontario, London.

Glenlyon Boys

The Glenlyon School boys offered to work for 50 cents an hour to give the money to charity. We employed four boys and were so very pleased. It really was very refreshing to see such nice neat clean boys and to hear those two small words "please" and "thank you." They did a great job of cleaning our garden. — H. Hawes, Victoria.

Gallery Replies

Audrey Johnson's facetious front page reference to the winning entry in the Vancouver Island jury show seems hardly worth a reply, tongue in cheek as it was, but various misrepresentations she has made insist upon clarification.

First of all, the "all black paintings" she refers to are neither all black nor paintings. They are much closer to drawings, the surface being built up with graphite and turpentine wash in one, and graphite and oil in the other, laid over a pencilled grid, each rectangle individually cross-hatched, and the whole gone over with colored pencil to emphasize the red and blue toned lustres of polished graphite.

The resultant subtle, delicate, and complex surface is evident to anyone standing in front of these works, and to see them as "totally black" suggests that perhaps your reviewer had her eyes closed at the time; to do them the further injustice of half-tone newspaper reproductions is guaranteed to kill any idea of variety they possess.

It is unfortunate that Johnson's article did not appear until the last day of the show. Had it been more timely, the public could have had an opportunity to judge these and other works in the show for themselves.

A final word about the Michael Belknap "white paintings" she mentions.

It wasn't all white. — Greg Snider, Acting Curator of Contemporary Art, Art Gallery of Greater Victoria (erroneously referred to in the article as the "Victoria Art Gallery").

Feared Epidemic

In my early life I was very susceptible to colds and flu until, in 1961, I began to have annual influenza innoculations which gave me a degree of immunity. Since marriage, I have ensured that my wife and now my children have also had these shots. In the past, they have been readily available either through my employment or through the family physician.

Now, in 1976, both the federal and provincial governments have stepped into the act with the advent of a feared epidemic. The result has been that influenza vaccine is no longer available to my family.

The swine flu dosage is to be issued only to people over 65 years or other persons who are chronically ill. Neither condition applies to us.

The ordinary garden variety vaccine is no longer being produced. I have attempted to obtain shots from our family physician, the Saanich health clinic and from McGill and Orme, pharmacists. All say they will not be able to assist my wife, my children or myself in this current year.

It seems to me that this is another example of governmental bungling and interference in private enterprise with the results that many more people may contact the 'flu this year than in any other year since innoculations have been available. — D. Lush, 594 Agnes Street.

Nisei Vets

The S-20 and Nisei Veterans is a Canada-wide association and includes Japanese Canadians who served in the Canadian Armed Forces during the Second World War.

These Canadian citizens of Japanese ancestry volunteered their services in spite of the many indignities imposed on them by their own federal government to demonstrate their loyalty to Canada as true citizens of this country and to exercise their rights to defend their country — a right originally denied to those born in British Columbia.

Therefore, as Canadians who suffered these insults from their own government we feel indignant and outraged to hear that our prime minister has tendered apologies to the premier of Japan for Canada's treatment of the Japanese Canadians during the Second World War.

Will our government never learn that the people who were victimized by official injustices in 1942 and the years following were citizens of Canada — not citizens of Japan?

If Mr. Trudeau wants to apologize officially for the actions of an earlier Liberal government, why not apologize to the right people — the Canadian citizens of Japanese ancestry here, back home?

What connection has the leader of a foreign nation with the situation, except through common racial origin?

Almost 35 years after the shameful event, it is chilling to discover that the official confusion which then justified the mistreatment of the Japanese Canadians still remains, and obviously clouds the minds of our prime minister and his advisers.

Let's get this straight. We Japanese Canadians are not connected with Japan now, nor were we then. Canada is our native land, always was.

Only if our leaders fully accept that fundamental fact, could anyone dare say it can't happen here again. — T. Shimizu, chairman; K. Nozaki, secretary; T. Sagara, treasurer; Etobicoke, Ont.

Insensitive

It would be interesting to know just how much of the taxpayers hard earned dough the little insensitive minister of Human Resources Bill Vander Zalm spends "investigating" so called welfare abuses? From the number of snoopers he seems to be adding to his staff it must be many times any savings he is likely to make.

And when I refer to him as "little" I don't mean his physical appearance. He may be a Jack in the bean stalk giant for all I know. "Little" refers to his fee fi fo fum nitpicking mind.

Isn't it time this little man went back to his market garden or whatever he did to squeeze out enough money to land him as a minister in a government that is tantamount to a millionaires' club? (Not that I'm against millionaires if they are also humane and compassionate.) There are a lot of creepy crawlies under stones for him to play with. — Gwen Cash, 1003-350 Douglas Street.

Arts Leadership

Throughout the summer months and well into the fall, Victorians read chastisements concerning Victoria's sad tourist season. There were reports of bad service, high prices and even unfriendliness (failures to smile).

This summer the city's artistic community offered Cabaret, Four Season's Gilbert and Sullivan, the university's Phoenix Festival, Victoria Symphony's festival and the inevitable Smile Show. Whether you call it artistic, cultural or theatrical, these summer events were positive and probably the best promotional equipment this promotionally backward city had going for it. What does this city, indeed this province, think the tourist is going to do with himself once he gets here? Live at Butchart's Gardens? Drink at cabaret nightclubs? Go to bed at 10 p.m.?

No one venturing into summer theatre here is foolish enough to think productions will last for two months on the basis of community support alone. No, indeed. Summer theatre is business — tourist business — and one of the best encouragements for a tourist's return visit to Victoria.

My personal involvement with the production of Cabaret enabled me to meet hundreds of tourists (who wanted to talk) from eastern Canada and the U.S., Vancouver, Seattle, Oregon and California. On several occasions I met persons who had travelled from Vancouver especially to see Cabaret. Requests were made from Alaska, Seattle and Kelowna delegates to tour Cabaret to those areas.

A province of Ontario publication called The Awkward Stage puts into bold figures what the arts have done for cities like Toronto, Niagara-on-the-Lake and Stratford. Thousands of tourists attend the Shaw Festival, billions of dollars are generated in Toronto via the cultural activity there and Stratford boasts 30 new industries as a direct result of the Shakespearean Festival.

Quality entertainment, and that means professional, is obviously a boon to the community. Perhaps this year we can start getting rid of the negativism so predominant in this community. It starts with good leadership, not only in the arts, who are providing it on their own, but at civic and parliamentary levels. — Barbara McLauchlin, company manager, Kaleidoscope Theatre Productions, 1322A Government Street.

Astute Council

In reply to your article Board has Developer in a Spin (Oct. 28), I was shocked to read that Colwood regional director Drummond moved to override the recommendation of the planners and have a bylaw prepared to rezone the 28 acres owned by the Ridley Bros. Development Co.

I would like to congratulate Mayor Mike Young, Ald. Murray Glazier and Ald. Alf Hood in being so astute in asking for more information on the rezoning application.

Mr. Drummond's credibility is clouded. I suggest he should resign PDQ as he has admitted he doesn't listen to his constituents. — A. Webster, 3619 Farhill Road.

The Dutch freighter Gabriella was abandoned by its 15-man crew last month when it began taking water in rough seas off the coast of Newfoundland. An emergency call for help was received by the Search and Rescue centre in Halifax at 10:04 a.m. More than 2½ hours later, a Canadian Armed Forces Argus aircraft arrived at the scene, followed by a Buffalo aircraft. The two planes simply circled overhead, taking pictures of the floundering vessel. There was nothing else they could do.

It was not until 2:45 p.m., more than 4½ hours after the emergency call had been received, that a Labrador jet helicopter from Prince Edward Island reached the Gabriella to begin rescue operations. By that time, only two of the crew members were alive. The rest, apparently, had died of exposure while waiting to be rescued.

It wasn't the first time that men have perished off Canada's Atlantic coast and it probably won't be the last. Canada's Search and Rescue equipment and personnel are inadequate, to begin with, and badly deployed to boot. According to James McGraw, Conservative member of Parliament for St. John's East, three fishing boats have foundered off the coast of Newfoundland so far this year; in each mishap, two lives were lost.

Mr. McGraw argues that, had a Labrador helicopter been stationed in Gander (which, incidentally, is not located in his constituency), it could have reached the Gabriella in well under an hour—probably in time to save many lives. And it could have saved other lives in other mishaps. Just one helicopter.

But Canada has never been capable of patrolling its own territory. On the Atlantic coast, on the Pacific coast and in the North, the story is the same: not enough equipment, not enough men. In 1970, a ship in the Gulf of St. Lawrence went down, with six lives lost. A commercial vessel, responding to the call for help, also went down, taking with her the captain and three crew members. A judicial inquiry into the disaster recommended that the ministry of transport provide better dispersal of personnel and aircraft on the Atlantic coast and that there be a detailed review of search and rescue procedures throughout Canada. Those recommendations were made five years ago.

Last April, Transport Minister Otto Lang himself admitted that Canada's search and rescue capability is inadequate and he initiated something he called an "internal Government study" of the matter. That study is now complete, and Mr. Lang says he will be making a statement in two weeks, er, three weeks, um, at any rate, soon. And will the study be released to the public? Difficult to say; no decision has been made.

Mr. Lang could use a navigator — someone to tell him that, if Canada's claims to 200-mile off-shore territorial rights and to domination in the North are to be anything more than armchair map-reading, then Canada will have to assume the responsibilities of sovereignty. It will have to patrol its borders — and properly. Ottawa will have to settle the jursdictional confusion between the Ministry of National Defence; it will have to place adquate equipment and adequate personnel in the places they are needed.

If anything is worth spending public money on, then human life in peril is worth spending it on. Lift your anchor, Mr. Lang.

Canada Must Control Its Own Oil and Gas Industry

By WALTER GORDON

(Gordon is a chartered accountant and management consultant who was finance minister in the Pearson Liberal government. He wrote this article for the Toronto Star)

It is not many years since Canadians, including government officials, believed we had unlimited quantities of crude oil and natural gas to meet all foreseeable requirements.

In a speech to the Canadian Institute of Mining and Metallurgy June 2, 1971, the then minister of energy, mines and resources said:

"Canada's total oil reserves were 469 billion barrels at the end of 1970 while total natural gas reserves were 726 trillion cubic feet. At 1970 rates of production, these reserves represent 923 years' supply for oil and 392 years' for gas."

In a speech in Pittsburgh Jan. 22, 1976, less than five years later, the present minister of energy, mines and resources said that Canada's oil and gas supplies are declining and increasingly we have to look to international markets for oil. He continued:

"As a result, we will be faced with a huge balance of payments deficit. Assuming no increases in OPEC prices by 1985 or sooner, this oil deficit alone could reach a staggering $5 billion — every year."

In the same speech, the minister stated: "Natural gas prospects are almost as bleak. Spot shortages are predicted starting late in this decade. By early in the 1980s, a gap will appear between domestic demand and conventional gas supplies."

Both sets of estimates came from the National Energy Board to the respective ministers. But of necessity the board obtained the basic information from the industry which is dominated by large Canadian subsidiaries of the international, mostly American, giants.

The tremendously optimistic estimates of 1971 were produced at a time when the companies were urging the government to approve greater exports of oil and gas to the U.S. Increased exports were approved.

The pessimistic estimates a few years later were produced at a time when the companies were urging the government to approve higher prices, ostensibly so they would be able to spend more on exploration. Increased prices were approved. The profits of the companies increased considerably, but exploration expenditures did not, according to Bruce Willson, a former industry member and former president of Union Gas.

In a speech in Lunenberg, N.S., Sept. 15, 1976, Willson said:

"In spite of greatly increased profitability in recent years ... the exploratory effort of the petroleum industry declined markedly in 1974 and 1975 compared with previous periods. While exploratory footage drilled in Alberta in 1976 is up by 36 per cent over 1975, it is down by more than 60 per cent in the northern frontier regions. The industry's claim that it needs more money to do its job properly and assure future supplies is just not borne out by its performance."

In each case, the optimistic estimates in 1971 and the pessimistic estimates a few years later supported the policies the oil companies were advocating at the time.

Understandably many people are now skeptical about pronouncements made by Canadian representatives of the international oil companies. In his book The Seven Sisters, Anthony Sampson records the history of the "big seven" international oil companies going back to the piratical days of John D. Rockefeller. Having read the recent revelations about bribery indulged in by Gulf Oil Inc., one may be excused for thinking the practices of those days have not been completely superseded.

My impression from reading The National Interest by Edgar Dosman was that some Canadian officials may have been misled by spokesman for the oil companies about the size of available reserves when the spokesmen in question were arguing for greater exports to the U.S. and, later, when the same spokesmen were pleading for higher prices so that they could spend larger sums on exploration.

This may not have been the deliberate intention of the oil company spokesmen. Nevertheless, it is safe to assert that many of those who have followed the debate in recent years no longer trust the statements made by or the propaganda of the principal Canadian oil companies, which are controlled abroad and whose main policies are determined by their absentee owners.

It is also safe to assert that, while the estimates published from time to time by the National Energy Board are prepared by its officials to the best of their abilities based on the information available to them, such estimates are also subject to considerable skepticism. After all, the board must still rely on data supplied by the oil companies.

Adequate supplies of energy at not too prohibitive prices are essential to the future well-being of the Canadian economy. That is why I have suggested that an independent royal commission should be established to inquire into all phases of the energy problems.

Such a commission should be required to report and comment on what has happened in the past including pricing policies, tax and royalty policies, the ways in which estimates of reserves were arrived at and then changed, the influence the propaganda of the oil companies has had on government policy, the profits earned and likely to be earned by the oil companies, and so on.

The terms of reference should be as broad as possible. The commission should be expected to make recommendations as to how Canadians can be assured of adequate supplies of energy in the future at the lowest possible cost and on practical and effective methods of conservation.

Quite apart from the need for new and independent assessment of the situation, we should decide how the Canadian oil industry is to be controlled. Should most of it be left in the hands of the Canadian susidiaries of the international oil companies whose motives and methods are open to some question? Or should we take steps to see that control of these companies, whose operations are of such vital importance to our future well-being, are transferred to Canadian hands?

In discussing the whole subject of foreign control of the Canadian economy, a previous article suggested that members of Parliament should express, by a formal resolution, the view that the foreign owners of the larger Canadian subsidiary companies should gradually over a period of years sell their shares to Canadians.

GORDON
. . . 'buy Imperial'

I have suggested that the larger Canadian subsidiary companies should include all such companies with assets in excess of $250 million. This would include the principal oil companies.

An even greater modification would be to apply the above formula to one company only, Imperial Oil, by far the largest company and the dominating influence in the Canadian oil industry. If Exxon Corp. was unwilling to sell its 70 per cent interest in Imperial to Canadians voluntarily, then the government should take over Imperial and transfer control of it to Petrocan or some other crown corporation to be managed in the best interests of Canadians as a whole.

If the government and members of the House of Commons are reluctant to face the whole issue of foreign control squarely, then at least they should be prepared to do something about the control of the oil and gas industry in Canada. As a minimum, Canadians should acquire control of Imperial Oil.

More than 60 years ago, some far-sighted men, including the late Sir Adam Beck, proposed that because of the vital importance of electricity to industry and to the public, the existing and future hydro-electric facilities should be transferred to public ownership.

The time has come when a similar approach should be made in the case of oil and gas, now more important in the scheme of things than even electricity.

Doubting U.K. Unionists Tories' Only Hope

By GEORGE BAIN
Toronto Star

LONDON — When it comes to elections, trade union members don't always go the way their leaders point; otherwise how come there never have been more CCF and New Democratic Party MPs in our House of Commons?

Yes, I know, support of the party of the moderate left by Canadian unions has been spotty, but in times and places it's been pretty good — better, in any event, than the results suggest. The fact is that when they've tried, trade union leaders rarely have been able to infect the rank-and-file with their own enthusiasm.

And, yes, I recognize that there is more cohesion here in electoral matters between union leaders and members, although whether that's to be attributed altogether to the influence of one or the other, or to something else, is a question.

One "something else" that could enter into it is the much more clear class element in the parties here than in Canada. Labor is workers, with a dash of intellectuals in tweeds. Tories are people with plummy accents and vests.

The Tories used to benefit to a degree from the support of working people who believed that governing was something best left to one's betters. But that sort nowadays belongs with the dime cigar, submissive women and children who accept to be seen and not heard, as relics of another age.

What underlies these ruminations is the thought — was, anyway, at the time of the Tories not-very-inspiring recent conference — that, no matter how badly Labor wallows, the Tories can't win. Even assuming Tory-type people to be numerically equal to Labor-type people, the fact would remain that the unions are the most effective mass organizations in the country — and the unions won't have nowt to do with the Tories.

It makes a good line of argument, subject only to the possibility of being dead wrong.

The alternative possibility, which must give trade union leaders anxious thoughts, is events could drive a wedge between them and their members. The leaders' identification with the government is nearly complete. They've advised. They've been consulted. They've been deferred to.

So what happens if unemployment goes on increasing, prices resume climbing in earnest, the value added tax (sales tax) has to be increased, or various other things happen as a result of the government's not flinching from the stiff measures everyone keeps insisting won't be flinched from?

There are places where clearly the wedge could be inserted — as, for instance, in the matter of public expenditure, which the Labor left and the unions generally hold to be sacrosanct.

The other night, an old gent, a lifelong Socialist, who started in the mines as a pit-boy of 13 but eventually got out of them and to a university, was saying on television that perhaps things had gone too far He had always felt that if a man couldn't work, he should be provided for, and if he was temporarily out of work because there wasn't any for him or because he was incapacitated, he should be provided for. "But when it comes to the point that it's better not to work . . ." he said.

A. J. P. Taylor, the historian, a Socialist, put the same thought this way a few days earlier: "Not only do we believe that the world owes us a living. There seems also to be a conviction that all of us who work hard and pay our way have a moral duty to enable the feckless and idle to live in style."

True or not, its the sort of thought that also could occur to a good many union members, working and paying their taxes and pinched by income restraints, to which their leaders are partners with the government, and by prices which the Labor government spectacularly has been unable to control.

In the privacy of the voting booth, where people don't always vote their affiliations — see the Canadian experience — that could have some effect.

So perhaps the Tories aren't entirely dead, although, by golly, to look at them, it's hard to tell.

'He Deserves a Baby'

By JUDITH MARTIN
Washington Post

Dr. Benjamin Spock, 73, has taken a 32-year-old bride. No one would wish anything but happiness to dear Dr. Spock, to whom we all owe so much. But—just one but:

May this union be blessed with issue.

May Dr. Spock, in his honored old age, after raising a set of children, after contributing to the nation's child-rearing lore, after putting himself on the line with his political views, after reaching a time of life when he might expect to enjoy a deservedly peaceful twilight — may Dr. Spock have to live with a baby.

This is not intended to be a vicious curse on the kindly pediatrician. One certainly would not wish, for instance, that his wife, who was 2 years old when the first edition of "Baby and Child Care" swept the country, slowly reveal to him the character defects he warned parents might develop if they did not take proper care. May he also be spared finding out that his in-laws went by his book and that it didn't work out the way it was supposed to. May he not find that his new 11-year-old stepdaughter has been spoiled beyond redemption because her mother didn't read the book.

No, we are all confident that anybody whom Dr. Spock would marry will turn out to be a happy, healthy adult with good eating habits and no problems with sharing.

But he deserves a baby.

May he have a house full of roasters with lids for sterilizing bottles, waterproof sheeting, nose syringes and other items he considers essential to equip a baby.

May he follow his own instructions on training an infant to sleep through the night: "If he fusses, wait a while to see if he quiets down. Of course, if he works himself up to indignant crying and it persists, you've got to get up. But try again in another month."

May he have a "fretful, hypertonic, colicky or irritable baby," and, as he instructs others, admit he can't stand it "and then laugh about it." May he be offered temporary relief from such a baby, but not accept it because he then thinks, as he says most people would, "Why should I inflict the baby on somebody else? Besides, I'd be nervous being away from him for so long."

SPOCK . . . his turn?

May he have what he describes as "a jouncing baby who rattles the whole house," but, as he advises, "not scold the baby or try to restrain him."

May he try to toilet-train this child, avoiding "chronic complaining and nagging," but merely impressing upon him how gratifying it would be to Daddy if he co-operated.

May he cheerfully smile at the "plenty of accidental messes" of a baby learning to feed itself, and not make a fuss about his furniture and rug.

May he read his entire section on "Traveling With a Baby" and notice that nowhere does it warn that this enterprise is hazardous to your health. On the contrary, his section on 2-year-olds suggests that it may be upsetting to them if you go away for a few days and "it is wise to take his sensitivity into account."

May he go over his section on "The Working Mother," where it suggests that the mother not work unless she really has to for financial or psychological reasons, and that she then "find a person who has the ability to understand a child and get along with him easily, and who is not likely to quit the job in a few months." And may he notice that in his family, where the husband can retire but the wife is at the height of her career, that person would be Dr. Spock.

Peltier Defence Group To Appeal to Basford

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Leonard Peltier Defence Committee will make a written submission to Justice Minister Ron Basford asking the federal minister to intercede in the Indian fugitive's extradition to the United States, committee spokesman Ron George said Thursday.

George said Basford promised to meet with the committee and to delay any decision on extradition of the American Indian Movement leader until he sees the submission.

Dennis McCrea, legal counsel for the committee, said the only other last avenue of appealing the extradition order — the Supreme Court of Canada — would be too expensive.

"The expense of such appeals in effect deprives not only Leonard Peltier, but all poor people of equal access to the court system," said McCrea, a Legal Aid Society staff lawyer.

McCrea said the submission will ask Basford to decide Peltier is a political prisoner.

2-4-D Report Publicity Sought

KELOWNA (CP) — Vernon Council would likely endorse the use of the weed killer 2, 4-D if the provincial government would make public recent scientific reports, Mayor Stewart Fleming of Vernon said Thursday.

The weed killer has been suggested as the best way to eliminate the Eurasian aquatic Milfoil weed that has infested Okanagan Lake.

Directors of the Okanagan basin water board agreed Thursday to ask the provincial government to make public technical data on the weed killer prepared by its specialists.

Fleming, a director and past board chairman, said cabinet promised the Board Sept. 29 that all technical information about weeds in Okanagan Lake would be made available to the public, but that has not been done.

He said Dr. Peter Newroth, a government employee who is a biological specialist in aquatic weeds, attended a recent Vernon council meeting with a report of his findings and refused to make the report public.

Fleming said Dr. Newroth had been told by his superiors not to make any public statements about his studies of weeds in Okanagan Lake.

Dr. Newroth released findings of a study on the herbicide 2, 4-D and its non-toxic qualities in spring and Fleming said Dr. Newroth's latest report would be beneficial in informing the public.

Murder Trial Accused Identified

VANCOUVER (CP) — Crown Witness Sam Moore testified in British Columbia Supreme Court Thursday that the man accused of murdering a 19-year-old student June 13, 1975, was working with him at a Sechelt home 10 days before.

Moore, whose wife owned the residence, said Douglas Robert McCallum was his helper in an alteration project at the residence.

McCallum is charged with the murder of Geraldine Ann Forster, 19, a former resident of Fort St. John, who was a student in nearby Burnaby.

The Crown has alleged McCallum stole the service revolver of RCMP Constable Wayne Dingle, who lived at the Moore home, and committed the murder with it.

Moore said he was with McCallum throughout the day June 3 at the Dingle residence, except for a 20-minute lunch period.

Moore testified his last positive recollection of seeing and talking to the accused in the Sechelt Peninsula area was on June 12 and that he saw him again about two weeks later. He said at that time McCallum's hands were badly burned.

The trial continues.

Chlorine Tanks on Cable?

VANCOUVER (CP) — The hydrographic vessel Richardson will resume its investigation today or Saturday into reports that four missing tank cars filled with liquid chlorine might be lying close to a British Columbia Hydro cable at the bottom of Malaspina Strait.

Des Allard, a transport ministry spokesman, said the Richardson — normally employed for scientific research by Environment Canada — used sidescan sonar Wednesday to investigate the reports but found nothing.

Allard said Thursday that the Richardson was being fitted with a device that would allow officials to plot its course through the investigation in waters about 60 miles northwest of here.

He said use of the device was similar to undertaking a grid search of an area and will prevent searchers from covering the same area twice.

The investigation began when Hydro workers suspected they had found the tank cars when an underwater power cable they were pulling up between Powell River and Texada Island became snagged on something heavy.

The tank cars have been missing since Feb. 19, 1975, when the barge on which they were being towed to the Macmillan Bloedel pulp mill at Powell River from a chemical plant near Squamish overturned.

When the Hydro cable was pulled up it was covered with what looked like white paint and marked with deep impressions that may have been caused by a tank car rolling over it, said Allard.

However, nothing has been found and there was no way of knowing yet what the object that marked the Hydro cable might be.

Scientists have said that if the tank cars are deeper than 200 feet (the Hydro cable is at 600 feet), the pressure of the water will be sufficient to stop any leaking chlorine from changing to gas from a liquid and bubbling to the surface.

"If they are intact, then corrosion could set in around the pressure relief valves in 25 to 30 years, and the chlorine would gradually and harmlessly seep out through the valves," said Allard.

He said trying to salvage the tank cars is dangerous because no one knows what condition they were in after they rolled off the barge.

Ever think of Peachland as a mining town?

With its lakeshore setting, encircled by fruit orchards, Peachland has for many years been one of the Okanagan's most scenic centres. When the Brenda Mine opened in 1969, the town retained all of its basic charm ...while gaining important economic benefits.

About half of the mine's employees and their families became residents of Peachland. New homes were built...the town's merchants gained new business from the mine and its employees...and the influx of young families was one reason for construction of a new school.

Fruit farmers in the district also benefited when the company built a large, earth-filled dam to supply water for the mine. Beyond serving the mine's water requirements, the new dam has allowed a great increase in the supply of water for irrigation and domestic use. The reservoir is called Peachland Lake and includes boat-launching facilities and lakeshore picnic sites for the use of local residents.

The mine, located 18 miles northwest of town, is a major producer of copper and molybdenum. It provides jobs for 435 people, and also supports many others in service industries dependent on mining.

The Brenda Mine has been good for Peachland and good for B.C. It's one more example of how mining utilizes a natural resource for the benefit of our whole province.

Foster Scale Tells You If It's Really a Disaster

You've heard of the Richter scale for measuring the intensity of earthquakes. Are you ready for the Foster scale?

Dr. Harold Foster of the University of Victoria's geography department has come up with a method of assessing the magnitude of a disaster in terms of human stress.

His formula is based on the amount of stress, suffering, environmental damage and damage to society that disaster creates.

The Foster scale can be used to make calculations on the magnitude of events ranging from a car accident to a major catastrophe such as the Second World War.

Foster said he developed the disaster magnitude scale because he is concerned about the loose usage of the term "disaster."

He also believes it is preferable to measure an incident in terms of the stress involved rather than simply according to the number of dead and the amount of property damage.

Foster differentiates between "adverse events", which range from zero to three on the scale, and "tragedies" which range from three to five. Diosasters range from five to seven and catastrophes seven to nine.

The definition "major catastrophe" is used for events measuring more than nine on the scale and the top five in this category are;

— Second World War, 11.1;

— The Black Death, 14th-century plague, 10.9;

— The First World War, 10.5;

Building Head Calls AIB 'Bureaucratic Frankenstein'

VANCOUVER (CP) — Jim Kinnaird, the new president of the British Columbia-Yukon Building and Construction Trades Council, said Thursday that the Anti-Inflation Board is a "Frankenstein" of which board members have lost control to the bureaucrats.

Kinnaird said in an interview that construction unions have yet to go before the board for consideration of their latest contract and bargaining is scheduled to start again next month.

"We have scheduled meetings with the bureaucrats," he said. "The bureaucrats have taken over.

"We haven't been in front of any appointed board members yet. The system is a monster that has got away. They talk about everything, not just wages."

The unions almost certainly would appeal any rollback and that could further confuse the forthcoming talks, he said.

Kinnaird, president of the council before leaving in 1973 to become associate deputy labor minister with the New Democratic Party government, said he returned because he was conscious of "a job undone."

He said he has hopes of improving turbulent relations between unions and employers and has already set priorities — a jurisdiciton assignment plan and evaluation of the trades and common-front bargaining.

He said he also wants the council to take a higher public profile and establish a research bureau.

Kinnaird prepared an industrial inquiry commission report on the B.C. construction industry last summer after a strike-lockout paralysed much of the industry. It's recommendations were eventually adopted by both the building trades unions and the industry.

Chretien Gambles on Plane

MONTREAL (CP) — Canadair Ltd. has the go-ahead to build the Learstar 600 executive jet, says Jean Chretien, recently appointed minister of industry, trade and commerce.

"If the plane doesn't work I'm out of a job," Chretien told the employees of government-owned Canadair, assembled in a hangar to hear the announcement.

The minister said the cabinet had authorized Canadair to exercise its option to build the Learstar and the federal government would guarantee a $50-million loan to get the project started, with the Quebec government guaranteeing an additional $20-million loan.

He said he only took over his present cabinet post seven weeks ago and had to rush to familiarize himself with the Learstar because Canadair's option to build it was to expire Nov. 1.

He told the workers the new aircraft would create 1,500 new jobs at Canadair, supplementing the present 1,800-member staff, but they would be forced to work in a very restricted time frame.

"You have to make a success of it," he said, adding that the government would review the project from time to time and had pledged Canadair's assets against the loan.

"The Learstar program will have an important impact on Canada's balance of payments," Chretien said. "Market surveys demonstrate that Canadair can expect sales of between 250 and 300 aircraft in a five to seven-year period.

"This will mean more than $1 billion in exports.

"Already Canadair has firm orders, with deposits, for 53 aircraft," the minister said. With a price tag of about $5 million, these orders will bring in $250 million. Another seven orders are expected soon.

Besides the new jobs provided at Canadair, subcontracts will create 1,500 jobs in Ontario and Manitoba.

Fifty of the orders are for export, while three Learstars have been ordered by Canadian customers.

One order, by Federal Messenger of Memphis Tenn., is for 25 Learstars and will receive financing from the federal Export Development Corp. The Memphis company will use the Learstar as a freighter.

The Learstar program, along with other contracts Canadair has landed recently, will bring the employment level at the suburban St. Laurent plant to 4,500, company president Fredrick Kearns said.

He said the Learstar has a range of 4,500 miles, a top speed of 630 mph and should have a veiling of 49,000 feet, specifications unmatched by any other executive jet existing or planned.

Egypt, U.S.S.R. Move to Patch Quarrel

Times New Services

WASHINGTON — Egypt and the Soviet Union completed two days of high-level talks Thursday with signs that the former allies are moving to patch up their strategically important quarrel.

The meetings, which took place in Bulgaria, coincided with a call in Egypt's leading newspaper for restoration of good relations with the Soviet Union as a way if counter-acting president-elect Jimmy Carter's "exaggerated partiality" to Israel.

Carter's election could not have been a factor in setting up the Egypt-Soviet talks, which have been under discussion between the two governments for about a month. However, Middle East observers believe that apprehension about Carter's pro-Israel stands, if not quickly checked by the incoming president, may cause a deterioration on Arab ties with the United States.

Egypt's cancellation of its military treaty with the Soviet Union, dramatically announced by President Anwar Sadat last March 14, was considered a product of U.S. Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger's Middle East diplomacy.

Meanwhile, former defence minister Moshe Dayan said in Tel Aviv, Israel will have to negotiate with Palestine Liberation Organization leader Yasser Arafat of it wants to reach a settlement of the Middle East conflict.

"It is necessary to speak with the enemy even if we have no compromise proposal," Dayan said on Israel's government-run television station.

Rivals Battle in Beirut

BEIRUT (UPI) — As rival factions battled across Beirut's "no man's land," Palestinian leaders today rejected the appointment by President Elias Sarkis of a moderate Lebanese Moslem to head the 30,000-man Arab League peacekeeping force.

Sarkis, a moderate Christian, named Col. Ahmed Al-Hajj Thursday to head the force, which now numbers 2,300.

A Palestinian spokesman said the appointment of Hajj, a Lebanese Moslem army officer who has remained neutral in the war, violated a recent Arab summit resolution "that stated that the commander of the Arab deterrent force should be a non-Lebanese and work under the personal command of President Sarkis."

At least 41 persons were killed Thursday in the worst fighting since an Arab League truce went into effect 16 days ago. The dead included a young Sudanese member of the peacekeeping force who was shot by a sniper.

In the latest fighting, Leftist and rightist spokesman said the situation deteriorated in a "grave manner" when the warring factions traded machine gun fire across the capital's confrontation line, dividing Moslem and Christian sections, and the southern suburbs.

Vancouver Car Pool Fizzle

VANCOUVER (CP) — Vancouver drivers aren't getting into the swim as far as joining car pools in concerned.

Since a $500,000 car pool project for commuters began Sept. 13, drivers have formed 25 car pools. The city project is aimed at creating 5,000 car pools in two years and cutting traffic congestion by 10 per cent.

"We don't expect an overnight reaction," project director Jerry Kirzner said Thursday.

"In Montreal or Toronto you can reach 5,000 people through one business. Vancouver doesn't have that, or at least not as many big offices."

The commuter program contacted five companies to participate in the pilot project last May — British Columbia Hydro, B.C. Telephone Co., MacMillan Bloedel, the Hudson's Bay Co. and Continental Insurance Co.

Frank Legg, car pool co-ordinator at MacMillan Bloedel, said that after 1,000 applications were distributed, 83 people expressed an interest and few joined.

He said the car pool computer couldn't match people who drive similar routes at similar times because of the small number.

There are many car pools at B.C. Hydro but not necessarily from this project, said company spokesman Jill Mead.

"The whole thing has really slowed down. You have to get employees living close by, working in the same area at the same time.

"They tried to cross-check Hydro with the Bay but the hours were too different."

Allan Bentley of Continental Insurance, said the project didn't wok with his company because only a few were interested. As in the case at Hydro, people could not be matched by the computer.

Bentley said he hoped more will participate next year and "I honestly believe we'll have more success in January."

Saul Cohen, a member of a car pool at the Bay, says the project is great because it is saving money and time.

He said he shares transportation with three others who pay $1 a day among them for parking. Th $1 is a special rate offered at several downtown parking lots for commuter program members.

Cohen said most company employees were paying $1.75 each a day for parking and now save $30 a month, not including gas and maintenance.

Vote Offer Rejected.

MONTREAL (CP) — Union leaders of Hydro-Quebec's 9,500 striking workers have rejected a management proposal to submit contract offers to union members in a secret vote organized by the department of labor.

The proposal will not resolve the main issues in the dispute, said Claude Morrisseau, chief negotiator for the utility's technicians, tradesmen and office workers.

"Members will vote on offers when the negotiating team judges the offers are acceptable," he said Thrusday in an interview.

Baby Alive Doll Described As Horrendous by Tester

OTTAWA (CP) — The Baby Alive doll, that for one consumer literally came alive with maggots, has prompted several complaints in the few years it has been on the Canadian market, Lenore Nilson, president of the Toy Testing Council, said Thursday.

Calling it "an horrendous toy," Mrs. Nilson said "inevitably we'd get some complaints about the doll" during public information meetings about toys.

She said the council has also had a dozen written complaints about Baby Alive.

Prominent feature of the doll, made by Kenner Products (Canada) Ltd. and selling in Ottawa for $21.97, is that it can be fed a special non-organic substance and swallow the "food." Kenner Ltd. is 50 per cent owned by Irwin Toy Ltd. of Toronto.

"It just doesn't seem to work well," she said, but she qualified her remarks by saying that the council has not tested the toy.

One consumer had complained that the special food substance leaks from the doll's "digestive tract," causing the mechanical parts to jam.

An another has told of coming back from a week's vacation to find his child's doll teaming with maggots, she said in a telephone interview.

Mrs. Nilson said she did not know if the doll had been fed real food instead of the non-organic substance recommended, or if the doll had not been washed out after the feeding.

Mrs. Nilson said the council has not tested Baby Alive because "we only test potentially good toys we hope to be able to recommend and it wasn't one we thought we would be able to recommend."

Family Starving as Gov't Drags Heels

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — A Chilean family which was forced to go to Spain to await a decision by Canadian immigration on whether it would be re-admitted needs money desperately to live on, Dave Farrah, a friend of the Ricardo Leiva family, said Thursday.

Farrah said the family is so poor its members have not been getting regular meals and the Spanish government will not allow the father to work.

Leiva, 35, took his wife Carmen and children Marcia, 10, and Richardo, 7, to Spain last July after the Canadian immigration department threatened to deport them to their native Chile.

Farrah said friends here are sending as much money as they can spare but it is not enough.

"They are in absolute desperation. It's cruel of the government to keep them in suspense," he said. Leiva has sought immigrant status in Canada ever since he fled the persecution of the military dictatorship that overthrew the government of Salvadore Allende in 1973.

His wife and family joined him a year later and they lived in Prince George for two years while seeking the legal right to become citizens.

Because applications for landed immigrant status are accepted only if they came from persons not in Canada, the Leivas finally left for Spain to make the application.

RAIL NOT PIPE—CN

EDMONTON, Alta. (UPI) — A $10 billion rail system, capable of carrying as much oil and gas as a pipeline, would be the best transportation investment for developing the Arctic, John Gatwick, a Canadian National Railways vice-president said Thursday.

But Gatwick said high construction costs for such a railway would mean "government alone is capable of committing the resources necessary."

Gatwick, CN's head of research and development for four years and currently vice-president of its marine division, based his remarks on a 13-volume feasibility study by CN and Canadian Pacific.

Gatwick proposed an Arctic railway capable of carrying "two million barrels of oil and three billion cubic feet of liquefied natural gas a day," which he said would be the equivalent of a 48-inch pipeline for gas and another 48-inch pipeline for oil.

"With that quantity, he said, "tariffs would be competitive with other modes."

Gatwick said it was a "serious mistake" to look at oil and gas movements by pipeline without taking into account the need for transportation systems in the North which can handle a variety of traffic in both directions.

Socreds Back Lougheed

NDP Leader Grant Notley stood alone in opposition as the 75-member legislature voted to support the premier's resolution that the federal government be asked not to agree to any formula to amend the constitution that would take away any rights, property or jurisdiction of a province without that province's consent.

Lou Hyndman, minister of federal and intergovernmental affairs, received desk-thumping approval for his defence of the resolution and of the government's acceptance of an amendment proposed by Opposition Leader Bob Clark.

The Social Credit leader's amendment requests the federal government not to support patriation of the British North America Act until the provinces agree unanimously to an amending formula.

Hyndman ended debate on the amended resolution by saying "It should be understood that the amendment, of course, has the same spirit involved in the main motion."

It does not bar the Alberta government from accepting patriation if there are guarantees that no amending formula will be adopted without the agreement of all the provinces, the minister said.

Chamber Will Obey AIB Rules

CHARLOTTETOWN (CP) — The president of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce said today that although the chamber disagrees with the federal Anti-Inflation Board it will abide by the board's provisions.

Bernard Panet-Raymond told local chamber members that public opposition to a law should be expressed by legal means.

The chamber went on record at its annual meeting recently as saying it could no longer support the Anti-Inflation Board in its presemt form.

"But unhappy as we may be, we would never counsel our members to stop filing their forms to government or to withhold their taxes," Panet-Raymond said.

"Like it or not, the program is the law. It must be observed and our members will respect it."

Panet-Raymond said the rash of strikes and lockouts in Canada in recent months reflects serious confrontations in government, labor and business.

He said these confrontations, which have adversely affected Canada's economic position, should be settled in an orderly and amicable manner.

Office Bill $300M Too High?

OTTAWA (CP) — A group of Progressive Conservative MPs presented a formal petition to Parliament on Thursday, asking the government to cancel a lease arrangement for office space at a privately-built development in neighboring Hull, Que.

The MPs say in their petition the government has committed itself to pay $300 million more for office space in the Terrasses de la Chaudiere project, now being built by Campeau Corp. of Ottawa, than if it were to build the project itself.

They call on the government to withdraw its commitment before Dec. 1, the date on which the first $50 million is to come from Campeau's bond-holders. The bonds are guaranteed by Ottawa.

The MPs who signed the petition are Sinclair Stevens (York Simcoe), Jim McGrath (St. John's East) and Elmer MacKay (Central Nova), but much of the detective work in the affair was done by Ron Huntington (Capilano), who first raised the cost question in an interview Oct. 1.

Public Works Minister Judd Buchanan, whose department is responsible for the deal, later showed reporters a set of figures which he said showed that when the deal was arranged in October, 1975, the terms appeared satisfactory.

The rise in costs was blamed on interest-rate increases and other factors which could not be foreseen.

Buchanan said the cost of expropriating the land and calling tenders was calculated in October, 1975, at $135,886,965. The projected cost of the arrangement with Campeau was $142,517,021, or about 4.9 per cent more.

The rate of interest used in the 1975 calculations was 10 per cent. The actual borrowing rate turned out to be 11.25 per cent.

How much the deal will cost has not be determined.

The government agreed to rent 1,825,000 square feet of office space in the Terrasses de la Chaudiere project for 35 years, with the option to purchase the entire project for $54 million.

In addition to two office towers, the project will include a luxury hotel, retail space and parking for 810 cars. Campeau says the whole thing will cost $164 million.

The petition filed by the Tories claims the net rent paid by the government under the Campeau lease is $16,747,000, and that Campeau will have a cash flow of $1,671,000 by reason of the hotel and commercial space rental.

The petitioners claim that the 1.825 million square feet being leased by the government could have been built for an aggregate cost of $100 million, including a 20 per cent profit for the developer.

Had it been financed at 9.5 per cent the annual yearly cost would have been some $9,700,000—for an annual saving of approximately $7 million—or a total saving over 35 years of $245 million.

In addition, the petition states, the governmetn has a buy-back option whereby it can obtain the property after 35 years for $54 million, which means that the people of Canada will pay approximately $300 million in unnecessary additional costs to own the property.

AIB APPEALS MAY REBOUND

By VICTOR MACKIE
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — A warning was given employers and employees Thursday that when they insist on referring an Anti-Inflation Board ruling to the office of the administrator, they are likely to come away with less compensation.

Donald Tansley, the administrator under the AIB act has voiced concern that employers and employees do not appear to have a clear understanding as to what a reference to the administrator entails.

He sent a letter to AIB Chairman Jean Luc Pepin asking the board to clarify in the public's mind the implications of a reference to the office of the administrator.

Tansley's letter, made public by the AIB, said many parties dissatisfied with AIB rulings have asked for referrals to him without being aware of the possible implications of their actions.

He made the following points:

1. Parties may not withdraw their case once it is in the hands of the administrator.

2. The administrator must investigate the whole matter referred to him — not for example, only one year of a two year compensation agreement.

3. The administrator conducts a fresh investigation, not a simple review of the AIB decision.

4. An order of the administrator is legally binding. The legislation provides severe sanctions if parties fail to comply.

"If the parties fail to appreciate these points, one can understand their reaction if those cases where the maximum permissible increase in compensation set by the administrator is lower than that reached by the board," said the administrator.

"This is especially true where payment has been already made on the board's future and the administrator orders a recovery based on his lower figures.

Credit Proposal Critics Rallying Around NDP

OTTAWA (CP) — Only New Democrats voted against proposed credit laws Thursday but they will not be alone in their attack on the bill during its next stage in Parliament.

After four days of debate, marked by criticism from all sides of the Commons, 169 Liberal, Progressive Conservative and Social Credit MPs, voted to approve the bill in principle. Voting against it at second reading stage were 11 New Democrats.

Each clause now will be considered in committee, where consumer groups, police and financial institutions affected by the proposed law will express their views.

The main protest against the bill has been that many provisions have not been outlined in detail in the legislation. The holes are to be filled later with regulations that can be changed by cabinet at any time.

Consumer Affairs Minister Tony Abbott said in an interview he is prepared to make amendments.

"I'm not going to go into that committee saying it's the greatest bill," he said. "I'm very open to constructive suggestions."

New Democrats say the bill really does nothing to help the low-income earner who is forced into debt through necessity.

Andy Hogan (Cape Breton-East Richmond) said finance companies and loan-sharks prey on people who cannot get loans from banks because they are considered a high risk.

PC MPs COMPETE

VERNON (CP) — Two Okanagan MPs whos ridings were partly merged by boundary changes effective next June said Thursday they will both seek the Progressive Conservative nomination in the new constituency of North Okanagan.

The riding is centered on Kelowna and Vernon and cuts deeply into constituencies currently held by George Whittaker (Okanagan-Boundary) and Howard Johnston (Okanagan-Kootenay).

Although both MPs flew here from Ottawa to attend the first constituency association meeting, neither openly challenged the other before the 100 party members who attended.

Whittaker, however, predicted Prime Minister Trudeau would call a snap election before the boundary changes go into effect because the Prime Minister would rather face a hostile public than possible rejection by his own party.

For a number of reasons, the small car market has substantially declined during the last two years.

This has hurt American Motors which is exclusively a small car producer.

Due to cost increases, small car prices have risen over $1,000 on average in the last five years.

In order to convince these buyers to return to the market and look to American Motors, we've reduced the list price of the 1977 Gremlin by $250.

What's in it for American Motors?

By reducing prices we expect to significantly increase our sales volume. In fact, we are banking on a 30% increase in Gremlin sales.

If we don't get this increase, then obviously we will be forced to adjust the price upwards just like our competition.

What's in it for small car buyers?

This reduction in Gremlin price means that now the AMC Gremlin lists for $241 less than Chevy Vega 2-door Sport Coupe and $233 less than the Ford Pinto 2-door Sedan.

Gremlin is priced lower but gives you more.

All three cars are equipped with bucket seats as standard equipment, but there the similarity ends:

Compare Gremlin's performance.

Gremlin gives you a 6 cylinder engine as standard equipment for greater acceleration to pass at city or highway speeds. The Vega and Pinto come standard with 4 cylinder engines.

The Gremlin has a wider track for stability, and at 2806 pounds Gremlin has more road-hugging weight.

Compare Gremlin's room and comfort.

Gremlin has the greatest overall width for more hip and shoulder room. Gremlin's long wheel base combined with its wider track and road-hugging weight gives you a smooth, stable ride.

Compare Gremlin's versatility.

The Gremlin is no ordinary 2-door Sedan. Only the Gremlin comes standard with a big wide hatch, fold down rear seat and even a carpeted cargo area, making the Gremlin a great small car for people who use a car for more than just basic transportation.

I'll Be Aggressive, Carter Promises

PLAINS, Ga. (AP) — President-elect Jimmy Carter, who won the White House by only 27 electoral votes, vows that the slimmest of victories will not halt his plans to pursue aggressively new goals for the United States.

The Democratic president-elect spoke on the main street of his little home town on Thursday night, and a crowd of about 400 watched in the chill autumn air as reporters, seated on metal chairs in the middle of the street, asked questions of the president-designate at the town's old railway station.

It was also Thursday, two days after the election, that the final two states completed tabulating their ballots.

Carter won the presidency with 272 electoral votes in the wee hours of Wednesday. The final accounting on Thursday gave him the 25 electoral votes from Ohio for a total of 297. It took 270 to win.

Carter took 40,291,626 votes or 51 per cent and Ford received 38,563,089 votes or 48 per cent.

"I wish we could have carried all 50 states, but since I didn't, I hope to demonstrate even before my inauguration my complete commitment to being president of all the American people," Carter said, holding his first news conference since the election.

The news conference, he said, will be the first of many. He said he hopes to hold at least two each month after taking office in January.

He said the narrow win will not stop him from "moving aggressively to carry out my campaign commitments." And he said there is a strong possibility he will seek a tax cut for average wage earners as one way of stimulating the economy if it does not pick up on its own by Jan. 20, when Carter will take the oath of office.

Such a tax cut, he said, "could be a strong possibility if there is no change in the rate of growth of the economy and if economic indicators should show a negative aspect." He said that would be a possibility that will be under continuous assessment.

Carter reiterated the frequent theme of his election campaign that relations with longstanding American friends were "neglected in recent years" — a reference to his view that detente with the Soviet Union has been pursued at the expense of Canada, other NATO allies, and Japan.

Despite his criticism of the diplomatic record of Ford and U.S. Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, Carter said "it should be clear" to foreign governments that there will be large degree of "continuity" in U.S. foreign policy.

Ticket 'Blitz' Threatened

NEW YORK (UPI) — City police union delegates unanimously rejected a proposed contract for a second time in less than six weeks and now threaten a traffic ticket "blitz" to force acceptance of union demands.

"We can't print money," responded Mayor Abraham Beane to Thursday's contract rejection by the Patrolmen's Benevolent Association. "If they have a proposal which stays within the city's money limits . . . we'll be happy to look at it.

PBA delegates also said they would not consider any new contract proposal unless authorities agree to drop charges against members cited for unruly conduct during demonstrations.

Beane said the disciplining of cops would be left to the police department.

Union delegates threatened a by-the-book ticket-writing spree by 18,000 members as a means of increasing pressure on fiscally-stricken New York.

The city's policemen, angered at a pay deferral and requirements they work 10 extra days a year, aroused the ire of many New Yorkers in recent weeks by loudly demonstrating at public events or through quiet residential neighborhoods, often late at night.

TV 'Family Hour' Illegal

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The "Family Hour" limiting sex and violence in prime time television entertainment shows was imposed through an unconstitutional collusion in censorship by the government and networks, a U.S. federal judge ruled Thursday.

But he has not authority to abolish the policy — or bring Archie Bunker back to Saturday night — declared U.S. District Court Judge Warren J. Ferguson.

Individual program makers and station managements must be free to make such decisions on their own, "independent of concern for government reaction" or industry agreements, Ferguson ruled in a landmark decision.

Ferguson upheld a complaint by television writers, directors and other program makers that the Federal Communications Commission illegally pressured the three major networks into adopting the policy — limiting sex and violence between 7 and 9 p.m. — through the National Association of Broadcasters.

"The desirability or undesirability of the family viewing policy is not the issue," Ferguson said.

"The question is who should have the right to decide what shall and shall not be broadcast, and how and on what basis these decisions are made . . ."

"Censorship by government or privately created review boards cannot be tolerated."

The judge agreed with the charge by the program makers that Richard Wiley, chairman of the FCC, "threatened the industry with regulatory action if it did not adopt the essence of his scheduling proposals.

Wiley and the heads of the three networks conceded in testimony during the lengthy trial that Wiley — reportedly under pressure from Congress — summoned the television executives to Washington for unusual meetings to express his concern.

BOMB FACTORY DISCOVERED

CHICAGO (Reuter) — A bomb factory believed used by a terrorist group dedicated to independence for Puerto Rico has been discovered here, law enforcement officials said Thursday.

Bomb parts, partially constructed bombs, and a letter in Spanish bearing the organization's logo — FALM — were found at the factory, located in a flat on Chicago's north-west side, the officials said.

The terrorist group has claimed responsibility for more than a dozen bombings in major American cities in the last two years, including New York, Chicago and Washington.

Congressman Admits Cash

WASHINGTON (WP) — House majority whip John J. McFall (Dem.-Calif.), who ranks third in the House Democratic leadership, admitted Thursday that he received $3,000 in hundred-dollar bills from Washington-based South Korean businessman Tangsun Park in October, 1974.

Before McFall was re-elected Tuesday to his 11th term in Congress, his administrative assistant, Raymond F. Barnes, speaking for the Congressman, twice denied to Washington Post reporters that McFall had received money from Park.

Thursday McFall himself said the money from Park was unsolicited and was put into McFall's congressional office account, which is used for buying stationery and office supplies, printing newsletters and the like.

"I don't know what (the $3,000) was for," McFall told Washington Post reporters Thursday. "It came about campaign time. I was under the impression that it was illegal to accept a contribution from a foreign national, so I put it in my office account.

"I'm not being bribed. I handled it legimately."

At least 22 present and former congressmen are currently under federal investigation of allegations that they and other U.S. officials were given cash, campaign contributions, jewelry, furniture, vacations and other gifts by Tongsun Pardk and other agents of the South Korean government to influence U.S. attitudes toward the regime of President Park Chung Hee.

McFall said that $2,500 of the cash from Park was deposited in his office checking account, and the other $600 was divided between the petty cash funds of his congressional office and his House whip office.

CARTER GOT 94% OF BLACK VOTE

WASHINGTON (WP) — Preliminary figures from a national survey of black voting patterns indicate blacks registered in record numbers, cast their votes more solidly for Jimmy Carter than they did for George McGovern in 1972.

In at least seven states, they showed: the black vote for Carter was 1.4 to 11.7 times his plurality over President Ford.

The figures are the first to come from a study of 500 precincts and wards, all of them more than 90 per cent black, in 23 states. The Joint Centre for Political Studies, a black political study group based here, conducted the study.

While it may take the Joint Centre several more days to gather and tabulate all its data, figures released so far indicate that blacks gave Carter 94 per cent of their votes.

Black voter turnout ranged from a low of 47 per cent in Houston to a high of 91 per cent in Goldsboro, N.C.

Gillnetters Call Off Warfare

OLYMPIA (AP) — The head of the Puget Sound Gillnetters Association Thursday pledged a cessation of demonstrations by non-Indian Gillnetters in the so-called Puget Sound fish war.

Phil Sutherland of Port Townsend made the surprise announcement at a meeting called by governor Dan Evans in an effort to find answers to the dispute.

There have been numerous arrests and one shooting as the non-Indians have illegally fished on the sound.

Sutherland said the state department of fisheries had convinced him that the state was justified in halting much of the non-Indian commercial fishing season on Puget Sound because of a plan to vastly increase future fish runs.

"We can in no way rationally take the fish that are intended for fish enhancement," he told the meeting, which included fisheries officials and representatives of trollers, gillnetters, purse seiners, Indians and sportsmen.

He said he has met with some of his association's members in an attempt to convince them to stop fishing in violation of the state closure. He said he could not promise total compliance, however.

"My association is made up of independent people," he said. "I can't demand it.

"Each one will have to decide that there is some future in this game despite all the trials and tribulations."

THIEVES STEAL, KILL TAME DEER FROM ZOO

SEATTLE (AP) — Two tame Japanese Sitka deer apparently were stolen from the Woodland Park Zoo and killed by thieves who may have slain the animals for food, police and zoo officials say.

Jim Foster, zoo director of science, and his veterinarian said Wednesday the year-old male deer were so tame that they easily could have been approached by humans.

The deer, valued at $300, were for sale to other zoos. They had been isolated in a small yard between two larger deer yards because they were in danger of being injured by adult male deer during the mating season.

Police say they were taken sometime Monday or Tuesday. A small trail of blood and hair was found along the route the deer were taken.

"From all indications, it would have been difficult to have moved the deer along the trail unless they were dead," Foster said. "Quite likely they were taken as food. If it were done strictly as vandalism, it is unlikely they would have been removed."

Caffeine Levels In Cola Probed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. Food and Drug Administration is questioning the safety of the flavor enhancer monosodium glutamate (MSG) and is suggesting that caffeine levels in cola drinks may need to be reduced.

A tentative review of food additives by the FDA also recommended that BHT, a preservative used to keep fats in foods from spoiling, be allowed to remain in use at present levels pending more study.

The results are part of a review that began in 1969 of more than 500 ingredients. The studies are commissioned by the FDA which later will make decisions on whether the ingredients should be left on the market, restricted or banned entirely.

The study said MSG should not be used in baby or junior food at all because animal studies suggest the newly born may be subject to brain damage from it. The baby food industry stopped using MSG voluntarily in 1970 but the report, if adopted by the FDA, would make the move mandatory.

The report said any conclusion that MSG is safe for adults, in whose diet it appears at the rate of 200 milligrams a day, should be "guarded."

"Answers to questions of possible risk to the public from ingestion of glutamates as added food ingredients require more definitive studies . . ." the report said.

"Whether glutamates ingested in amounts similar to those added to foods can produce significant untoward effects in man has not been established," it added, calling for studies on the long-term impact of the additive.

The panel of scientists doing the caffeine review gave the FDA a split decision on whether it should be allowed to continue at present levels in cola drinks. One group recommended restrictions while the other said there is no evidence it is unsafe but suggested additional studies. The report did say there are several "areas of concern" regarding caffeine, including its impact on children "during the period of brain growth and development."

Trident Protesters Convicted

SEATTLE (CP) — James and Shelly Douglas of New Westminster were among eight people found guilty in a Seattle court Thursday of destroying United States government property and of trespassing.

The charges were laid after an incident last summer at the Trident nuclear submarine construction site near Bangor, Wash., in which wire fences were cut.

The couple and six others are members of the Pacific Life Community, a pacifist group, which is opposed to construction of the nuclear submarine base.

No date for sentence has been set.

The defendants told U.S. Magistrate John Weinberg that they forced their way onto the navy's Trident site to protest illegal development of nuclear first-strike weapons by the U.S. government.

The other defendants were Jo Maynes and Laurel Raymond, who completed a 30-day jail term in connection with a similar demonstration last May, John William, Caroly Wildflower, Michael Adams and Tom Schmore who said he was acting under "higher laws."

CRYSTAL WILL BE POLISHED

Victoria's Crystal Pool, which lost some of its early sparkle as neighboring municipalities opened up their own pools with lavish "extras," will be given a polishing.

At a city recreation committee meeting Thursday, chairman Ald. Ron McKenzie disclosed that plans are being considered to expand and improve the facilities to encourage greater use.

Although he gave no further details at the meeting, McKenzie said later the upgrading would include the provision of saunas and a swirlpool similar to those at the Oak Bay Recreation Centre.

He said new change rooms needed for sports groups in the adjacent Central Park could also be incorporated in the expansion palns.

Possible sources of financing would be the Springridge neighborhood improvement program, the provincial government's community recreation facilities fund and the city's own coffers.

Meanwhile, the committee recommneded no action on a request for new equipment from the newly-formed Crystal Pool Users Association.

The group had suggested purchase of an elecronic timing device costing up to $75,000 and underwater loudspeaker system costing about $3,000.

Insurance Companies Discriminate—Chief

By MIKE HUGHES
Times Staff

The chief of the Songhees Indian band charged Thursday insurance companies discriminate against Indians.

John Albany said in an interview he reached that conclusion after the Songhees Housing Society tried unsuccessfully to get insurance for five new houses on the reserve.

He said the society, set up about two years ago, eventually found one agency that would insure the houses but only after being told by several people in the business that insurance companies discriminate against Indians.

"I really think it is discrimination," Albany said.

He said it is particularly grating because people are always saying the Indians should help themselves.

Here is a case where an Indian band attempted to solve its own housing problem without taxpayers' money only to be told there is no insurance available.

"The public should be made aware of how tough it is for us to get our nose out of the water," Albancy said.

A check with several Victoria insurance companies did not back up the chief's charges as company spokesmen said Indians are, in most cases, treated the same as anybody else.

A spokesman for one company did say, however, it is possible that discrimination does happen in certain cases.

She said her agency handles insurance for companies that would insure houses on Indian reserves but it is tougher for Indians to get insurance.

She said the reason is that there is a high loss factor on some reserves due to a high crime rate and inadequate fire protection.

Another company said it is likely the houses on the reserve are regarded as rental homes and that explains the difficulty getting insurance.

Owners of rental premises do run into problems because of the high loss factor.

But this is the case for anybody, no matter what creed, color or religion, he added.

Another company spokesman said his agency would insure any property as long as the proper standards are met.

"We don't care whether they are white, black or polka dot," he said.

He said it is possible the houses on the reserve didn't meet building code or maintenance and housekeeping regulations.

Another factor on Indian reserves, he said, is that the houses are not checked periodically by the fire department like homes in municipalities.

Albany said he is making the matter public so the insurance companies can explain why they are reluctant to insure the reserve houses.

"What is in back of this decision? Come clean with us," he said.

The Songhees Housing Society was established in an effort to provide band members with better houses than were available under the system of grants from the federal department of Indian affairs.

The band decided to consolidate the money available for housing each year — now $30,000 — and use this along with low-interest money from Central Mortgage and Housing to build modern homes.

The society borrowed $140,000 from CMHC on a 25-year loan at eight per cent and built the five new houses.

The houses are then turned over to band members who have to pay $225 a month to the society which sends the money to CMHC.

If the occupants move, they will be given back all the money they invested in the house.

Everybody is happy with the system, Albany said, which he thinks is a first in Canada.

He said it was impossible under the grant system to build decent homes as some of the money had to go toward improving the older houses.

Albany said the society hopes to build another six or seven houses next year.

He said the present handout system for Indians is not working but until it is changed they should try to work within the system rather than hold demonstrations.

"You have to take an existing situation and see what you can do with it," he said. "Everybody has to do their part."

TOWN TALK

Does male chauvinism persist at City Hall? Watch this space and we'll keep you informed.

It will be interesting to see how the males-only upper echelons of the city administration handle the problem of finding a replacement for city clerk Morran Waller, who retires at the end of this month.

For years, his super-efficient assistant Terry Durshel has taken over the job whenever Waller has been absent on holiday, and things have run as smoothly as ever.

Town Talk is betting she will apply for the position — and also that there's no one better qualified or more deserving.

But, of course, she is a woman and the traditional thinking at City Hall seems to be that women are fine provided they stick to the routine clerical-secretarial stuff and don't get too uppity . . .

The award recognizes the committee's efforts in providing a $21,000 bus for the Gorge Road Hospital, as well as a $16,500 bus for Saanich Peninsula Hospital patients.

Stepping into a bank these days is like a trip with Alice into Wonderland. Same thing up the street at the trust company or credit union. You need a program to guide you through a forest of options.

You can have a blue chip account, a prime 55, preferred interest, deposit certificates, term-note covenants, limited chequing, free chequing, no chequing, package banking, free money orders, cut-rate safe deposit, free traveller's cheques, passport, will and travel services, interest calculated monthly, quarterly and semi-annually on varying balances . . .

But one thing that hasn't changed significantly for decades is the old-fashioned savings account which still plods along paying relatively low interest on the minimum six-month balance—a ripoff when other options pay up to 10½ per cent.

Putting money aside is like buying groceries; it pays to shop around. As one near-bank boasts of its plateful of free services and high interest, "It's better than money in the bank."

Jobs Before City Beauty —Chamber

Victoria should postpone its campaign to make the area more beautiful and concentrate on making it more attractive for industries, Victoria Chamber of Commerce economic development director Jeremy McCall said today.

"Making the city nore beautiful is a luxury we can not afford at this time when so many jobs are being lost," he said.

McCall was commenting on a statement Thursday by Stan Purdy, regional manager of Canada Manpower, who said attracting new industries to Victoria had become an urgent issue.

"I agree with Mr. Purdy 100 per cent," McCall said.

"As a first step we must protect the jobs we already have. We must stop evicting industries from the Inner Harbour area. I know we could make the Inner Harbour the most gorgeous place in the world but it would cost us many jobs.

"We can't afford to lose any more."

He said Victorians will have to change their priorities to take into consideration the new economic realities in this area.

McCall said the whole lower Island region seemed more intent in beautification than in attracting industries.

For example, the Royal Oak industrial park has strict regulations about the number of trees that must be planted per acre and about the pleasing shapes of industrial buildings.

"Maybe we can not afford these types of regulations at this time. We are all going to have to examine our priorities and possibly scale down our esthetic standards until economic conditions change."

Second step in the chamber's campaign, after protecting jobs already here, will be to promote development of new industrial sites for the Victoria area.

The shortage of suitable industrial land plus the hassle companies get from municipalities are two major reasons industries do not come to the Victoria area.

He said executives often spend several weeks meeting various boards and officials in this area only to discover at the end that no suitable land is available.

The whole exercise has been a waste of valuable time.

McCall said the flow of jobs out of the city would not be reversed overnight but changes could come if regulations were simplified and esthetic demands were scaled down.

Bulky industries might never come to Victoria because of transportation problems and low market potential, but many light industries could be attracted to Victoria through a concerted campaign, McCall said.

10 Men To the Rescue

Would you believe she was stranded on the roof of her house at 3740 Carey, and it took a squad of Saanich firemen and policemen to get her down?

How did it happen? Simple. She had left her keys inside and was trying to get through a second-storey window to retrieve them.

Her neighbor, Bill Van Shack of 3730 Carey, from whom she rents the house, told her the venture was risky, that the roof was too slippery with dew. But, he said, she was determined.

He held the ladder for her as she climbed on to the roof 20 feet above the ground. As she crawled towards the window she started to slide backwards.

Firemen were there in a flash, and policemen too — 10 in all — and got her down.

No, they didn't try the same trick. They broke a bolt in a basement door and let her back into her house that way.

Van Shack said he knows the feeling of being trapped on a roof. Earlier this week he was cleaning his gutters when his ladder blew away. A neighbor came to his resscue then.

New Inspectors Ruled Inside Police Union

The B.C. Labor Relations Board has ruled that two Saanich police inspectors, recently promoted from staff sergeants, still belong to the policemen's bargaining unit.

The board said the Saanich Police Board's upgrading of the positions of Robin Stewart and Ron Coulter in June together with their change in rank did not warrant lifting the men out of the unit.

"There is nothing inherently inconsistent between being a member of any particular bargaining unit and the kinds of supervisory duties resting on Inspectors Stewart and Coulter," the board said.

However, the LRB said the two other inspectors — Ted Owens and C. R. Trueit — are excluded from the unit.

Spokesmen for the association were not available for comment today and police board members had not yet received copies of LRB ruling and so reserved comment.

The board made the ruling Tuesday following a hearing Sept. 29 dealing with a three-part application from the Saanch Police Association.

The association alleged that in promoting the staff sergeants the board had violated sections of the collective agreement dealing with job posting of vacancies and technological change.

The board was also asked to rule that the four Saanich police inspectors are employees within the meaning of the Labor Code and should be included in the bargaining unit.

The association also sought to have its charter changed so inspectors can be included in the bargaining unit.

The association's main concern was that the board had promoted the two staff sergeants without adding new staff in their place. This removed two higher-paid men this year from the bargaining unit and the association said this would, according to federal Anti-Inflation Board regulations, lead to a reduction in the 1977 pay increase of each member.

The AIB works from the the last month of its contract. size of an employee group in

The board also ruled that the police board did not violate any sections of the collective agreement in promoting the two staff sergeants.

Also rejected was the association's request for a change in its charter so inspectors can be included on the bargaining unit.

The board said this request was denied on the understanding that the two new inspectors are included in the unit.

In making its ruling on Stewart and Coulter remaining in the unit, the board said the two men would be spending "a substantial part of their working hours" on jobs associated with the position of staff sergeant.

The board said it would be contrary to common sense if an employer could simply remove an employee from the protection of a collective agreement by changing his title.

The board said there were qualitative differences between the roles of Owens and Trueit and those of Stewart and Coulter.

"It is very clear to us that Inspectors Owens and Trueit, while not employed for the primary purpose of exercising management functions over other employees, are nevertheless recognized by all concerned as being very much a part of the management team."

Re-Arrested Man Wins Bail Bid

Mr. Justice Davie Fulton granted a habeas corpus application made by lawyer Cecil Branson on behalf of James R. Balez, charged with murdering another Duncan man, Jim Bowman, June 9 at Duncan.

Branson argued that Balez was being held illegally, in his interpretation of the Criminal Code and the Bill of Rights, and had had no opportunity to put his side of the event before a county court judge before being committed.

After being freed, Branson said, Balez received a new warrant of arrest. In provincial court, Judge William Ostler said he had no jurisdiction to set aside the warrant.

Branson then sought a bail hearing and Balez was released on bail.

ASK THE TIMES

Q. I would like to know the date, month and hour of the 1949 earthquake. F.P.

A. There is no official record of an earthquake in 1949. Perhaps you are referring to the one that took place in 1946. It shook Vancouver Island at 10:14 a.m. on Sunday, June 23. There was very little damage. Also around that time an earthquake was reported on Sept. 8, 1951 in Japan.

Highway Bids Wednesday

Tenders for the widening of the 3.5 miles of the Trans-Canada Highway between Town and Country Shopping Centre in Saanich and Thetis Lake overpass will be called Wednesday, Highways Minister Alex Fraser said today.

The tenders will be returnable Dec. 10 and work on the four-lane project should start before Christmas, he said.

Fraser said that all necessary right-of-ways have not yet been purchased, but this process can continue during construction.

The entire project will probly take two years, he said.

The provincial government said earlier this year there would be no allocation for the highway widening in the immediate future.

However, in August, the highways department said the project will begin this fall.

The change of plans followed complaints from Colwood, Langford and Metchosin about heavy daily congestion in the stretch between Victoria and Gbldstream.

Commuter traffic consistently backs up cars, trucks and buses on the 20-year-old two-lane highway serving Victoria-up-Island communities.

The widening project is in keeping with improvement projects north to Nanaimo in recent years. Much of the highway beyond Goldstream is already either three or four lanes.

Realtors Facing Tricky Legal Pitfalls—Hyndman

Recent court cases give real estate salesmen a new and higher duty in advising sellers on a fair price for their home, lawyer Peter Hyndman said in Victoria Thursday.

A salesman can be sued if he fails to advise his client the house may soon be worth more than the asking price, Hyndman told a general meeting of the Victoria Society of Real Estate Salesmen at The Empress.

A purchaser also can sue the salesman if he feels he has paid too much for a house, Hyndman said.

Courts are beginning to apply the same high standards of care applied to doctors, lawyers and other professional groups, he said.

Hyndman, who is also president of the B.C. Social Credit League, said he was speaking only as a lawyer and not as a politician.

He outlined a British Columbia court case in which a vendor signed an agreement to sell his house for $43,000 and then refused to complete the deal because he felt the house was worth more.

The purchaser sued to force him to complete the deal and the vendor launched a counter suit against the real estate salesman for bad advice.

An appraiser hired by the purchaser said the house was worth $42,500 while one hired by the seller said it was worth $50,000.

The judge ordered the vendor to sell the house to the purchaser for the agreed price of $43,000.

However, the judge added that it appeared the house was really worth about $46,000,, not $43,000, and in effect the vendor had lost out on $3,000.

So he ordered the salesman to pay the vendor $3,000 in damages for failing to advise his client on the true value of the home.

The judge said there was no intention on the part of the salesman to misrepresent the value of the house, but he was negligent in not making a thorough check of market conditions before advising the client.

Hyndman said the sale took place in a time when prices were soaring and the judge felt the salesman should have told his client that the house would be worth more within a matter of weeks

This means salesmen must be able to predict market trends as well as determine the present value of house, Hyndman said.

He said this is a heavy burden on the salesman but it is clear from the judge's decision that a salesman can be sued if he fails to advise his client on the direction of the market.

The same burden would fall on a salesman in a falling market, Hyndman said.

For example, if a salesman advises a client to sell at $42,000 when prices are falling rapidly and the owner wonders if he should list at $38,000, there could be a lawsuit if the price collapses and the client eventually has to sell at $26,000.

It appears the vendor could be able to sue the salesman for $12,000, the difference between the selling price ($26,000) and what the vendor wanted to sell at ($38,000).

Hyndman said real estate companies could assist their salesmen by publishing monthly newsletters on the state of the market.

If there is an unexpected development, like a change in mortgage interest rates, the company might be well advised to put out a special edition of the newsletter to take into account the new market condition, he said.

The salesman should be protected as long as he advises his client on the contents of the newsletter.

FERGUSON TRAILING BY FOUR

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. — Victoria professional Cec. Ferguson drifted to an over-par performance for the first time in three days Thursday but still remained within hailing distance of the leaders in a $75,000 National Golf Association tournament here.

The Canadian rookie scored a one-over 74 Thursday to carry a 54-hole total of 213, four under par, going into today's fourth and final round at the McCormick Ranch course.

Ferguson, who had rounds of 70 and 69 in the first two days, trails co-leaders Jerry Tape and Larry Jacobson by four strokes.

Oak Bay Scores Two Wins

Defending-champion Oak Bay won both of its matches as preliminary round-robin play opened Thursday in the British Columbia high school girls' field hockey championship tournament at Lansdowne Junior High School.

Gail Hoskins fired three goals to set the pace for Oak Bay, scoring both tallies in a 2-0 shutout over Centennial of the Fraser Valley and scoring once, along with Maria Lee in a 2-0 blanking of Rutland.

Spectrum, winner of the Victoria title, Mt. Douglas and Norfolk House — the other Victoria represenatives — weren't as fortunate . . .

Spectrum nipped Vancouver's Prince of Wales 1-0 on a goal by Maureen Cockrill but lost by the same count to Burnaby South; Mt. Douglas played to a scoreless deadlock with Burnaby North and lost 1-0 to Vancouver's Point Grey; and Norfolk House downed Cowichan 2-1 on goals by Virginia Crofton and Briony Penn but dropped a 3-1 decision to Magee. Nina Bland scored the lone Norfolk goal during the loss.

Carolyn Horton scored both Cowichan goals against Norfolk House and Tina Hutchins connected for a goal to give Cowichan a 1-0 win over Cranbrook in its other game.

Max's Boy Breaks Out

By The Canadian Press

Big Peter McNab laughed when asked what he planned to do with the puck he retrieved after scoring three goals in a game for the first time in his National Hockey League career.

"I'll give it to my dogs, I guess, and have them chew it up," the six-foot-three centre said Thursday night after leading Boston Bruins to a 7-5 victory over Chicago Black Hawks. "Maybe if I give them this they won't chew up anything else."

McNab, son of Washington Capitals general manager Max McNab, appears to have found a home in Boston since a deal of free agents which sent Andre Savard to Buffalo Sabres.

In just 13 games, McNab has scored 12 goals and collected five assists, helping the Bruins to a 10-3 record and a nine-point lead in the Adams Division.

McNab, who was the American Hockey League's most valuable player in 1973-74 after earning all-America honors at Denver University, admitted he may have been too defensive-minded at the start of the season.

"I know . . . this team had a tremendous season last year," he said. "I didn't want to be the cause of the team going downhill. I'm still learning the technique of when to go in and when to stay back. I guess I'm getting a little better at it."

After a 4-2 road record on an extended trip, the Bruins were welcomed home by a crowd of 14,597, the first sellout at Boston Garden this season.

"We should have won," Shero said. "We outplayed them. We deserved to win. But that Giacomin . . . was superb all night long."

The Red Wings played without defenceman Bryan Watson, who was suspended earlier in the day for 10 games by NHL president Clarence Campbell for breaking the jaw of Chicago's Keith Magnuson's last Saturday at Olympia.

DOUG PEDEN - EDITOR

Will Real Bidders Stand Up?

NEW YORK (AP) — And now, the bidding begins.

Agent Jerry Kapstein's Providence, R.I., offices open for business bright and early today and baseball owners and general managers will be lining up to talk money with the man who represents 10 of the 24 free agents selected in Thursday's free-agent clearance sale.

"We have appointments with clubs in both leagues starting Friday," said Kapstein, who watched quietly in a corner of the room as baseball divided up the available talent.

Thirteen players were chosen by the maximum 12 teams and nine of those men are clients of Kapstein.

The most popular player at the start of the draft was Oakland A's outfielder Joe Rudi, who was selected six times on the first round. The first player to be removed from the list of eligibles was Oakland catcher Gene Tenace, who reached his 12-team limit midway through the third round. Kapstein represents both of them.

Others chosen by the 12-team limit in order were Rudi and another Oakland outfielder, Don Baylor, outfielder Gary Matthews of San Francisco Giants, pitchers Don Gullett of Cincinnati Reds, Bill Campbell of Minnesota Twins, Wayne Garland of Baltimore Orioles and Oakland reliever Rollie Fingers, infielders Bobby Grich of Baltimore, Sal Bando of Oakland, and Dave Cash of Philadelphia Phillies, and pitcher Doyle Alexander of New York Yankees.

Many of the assembled baseball brass sought Kapstein out after the draft, introduced themselves and chatted, obviously laying the groundwork for their future negotiations.

First drafted was Baltimore outfielder Reggie Jackson, who was picked by Montreal Expos.

Sal Bando (Oakland): Chicago White Sox, Milwaukee, St. Louis, Detroit, San Francisco, Texas, Cleveland, New York Mets, Minnesota, Pittsburgh, Baltimore, Kansas City.

Bill Campbell (Minnesota): Montreal, Chicago White Sox, St. Louis, Detroit, California, Chicago Cubs, Boston, Oakland, Houston, Los Angeles, Philadelphia, Kansas City.

Dave Cash (Philadelphia): Montreal, Chicago White Sox, Milwaukee, Detroit, San Francisco, Boston, Minnesota, Oakland, Los Angeles, Baltimore, Kansas City, New York Yankees.

Nate Colbert (Oakland): None.

Cowboys Take Fifth Straight

By The Canadian Press

Calgary Cowboys scored three goals in the final period to edge the injury-riddled Edmonton Oilers 4-2 in a World Hockey Association game in Calgary Thursday night.

But the victory, Calgary's fifth straight, did not please coach-general manager Joe Crozier, who was upset by the lack of defensive punch displayed by his team.

Admitting the Cowboys had won the games, he said he still wasn't happy with his team, adding that without great goaltending from Don McLeod, they would not be anywhere.

In other WHA action Thursday night, Birmingham Bulls stopped Phoenix Roadrunners 5-3 and Indianapolis Racers stung the Cincinnati Stingers 5-2.

Crozier said he talked to his players after every game but nothing improved, adding: "Tonight, I decided not to say anything."

Crozier commended the Oilers, who are missing three players from the lineup due to injuries, for a strong checking game and added the Cowboys should have been able to break through the Oilers defence.

The Oilers, who are without Peter Morris, Bob Nevin and Barry Merrell, dropped into the cellar in the Western Division standings, one point behind fifth-place Calgary.

Salmon Catches Pick Up In Several Island Spots

Salmon fishing success seems to be picking up in a number of spots around Vancouver Island.

Winter chinooks from 12 to 20 pounds are coming in off Church Rock, Bedford Island and Aldridge Point. Fishermen trolling anchovies, strip or minnows with 40 to 60 feet of line and eight to 16 ounces of lead have enjoyed the best catches.

Others working along the kelp bed as well as the middle of Pedder Bay are landing both winter chinooks and coho in the five to six pound range using the same types of bait, a pound of lead and 50 to 80 feet of line.

Trial Island waters are yielding winter chinooks to six pounds using 75 to 100 feet of line, two pounds of weight and strip.

Strip, Tom Mack spoons and Squirts, fished both deep and shallow, are hauling in coho from five to 13 pounds along the south side of Salt Spring Island, through Sansum Narrows and off Whiskey Point. A few winter chinooks to six pounds have been boated between Wain Rock and Hatch Point.

Catches of blues and jacks have been scattered throughout Saanich Inlet while a few coho to nine pounds have been caught off Mill Bay and some winter chinooks to 12 pounds have come in from the Bamberton shore.

Further up-Island, some good coho catches are reported in Cowichan Bay and a mixture of winter chinooks and jacks is coming in off Bold Bluff.

There's no problem getting a limit of jacks and blues anywhere off Nanaimo these days and some winter chinooks averaging eight pounds are being picked up by stripcasters and buzz-bombers working off Harmac, the Fingers and Northwest Bay.

Fly fishermen wading off the beaches around the Oyster River continue to pick up some good catches and a few winter chinooks to 12 pounds have been landed off the Argonaut Wharf at Campbell River using Buzz Bombs and Stingsildas.

River fishermen using spinners, roe and egg-type flies are landing fantastic catches of jack coho in the Quinsam and Big Qualicum rivers—where hatcheries are located.

Rainbow trout and salmon have been taken in the upper reaches of the Cowichan River by anglers using an egg-type fly. The odd steelhead is starting to show in the Campbell River.

Quamichan and Cowichan Lakes continue to yield excellent trout catches to bait fishermen and youngsters dunking worms in the Puntledge have picked up fair-sized trout.

McCreight Lake, located between Campbell River and Kelsey Bay, was also mentioned as a top-notch spot to try for trout.

NIBBLES: Those public meetings over the joint federal-provincial salmonid enhancement program seem to be generating a lot of news copy . . . Unfortunately, every local and wire service story to date has called it a "salmon" enhancement program . . . Trout, a provincial responsibility, will be enhanced along with salmon in many of the projects while other schemes will be aimed specifically at steelhead and other sea-run trout populations . . . Hence the "id," which includes both salmon and trout . . . Or doesn't accuracy count?

Hunters planning on going afield next week should note that most loggers will be working Nov. 11 in the Sooke area . . . In lieu of that holiday, operations will shut down Nov. 12 to make a long weekend . . . Although all the main haul roads are open 24 hours a day, access on most of the secondary roads is limited to non-working hours.

Canucks Recall Pair, Send Sedlbauer Down

VANCOUVER (CP) — Vancouver Canucks of the National Hockey League made a two-for-one swap Thursday with their Central League farm team Tulsa Oilers.

Left-winger Brad Gassoff and centre Bobby Lalonde will join the Canucks for their game tonight against Los Angeles Kings, while left-winger Ron Sedlbauer will go to the Oilers.

Gassoff, the Canucks' No. 2 amateur draft choice in 1975, suffered a knee injury during the off-season and has been in Tulsa since Oct. 18. In seven games he recorded one goal and five assists.

Mount Doug Keeps Title

Mt. Douglas was hard-pressed but managed to stave off determined bids by both Victoria High and Oak Bay to retain the Greater Victoria high school swimming championship Thursday at Crystal Pool.

Club swimmers in the "A" class accumulated 442 points to set the pace as Mt. Douglas won its fourth title by topping the 11-school, 44-event meet with an aggregate total of 578 points.

Victoria, which placed sixth last year, was runner-up with 426 while Oak Bay, a 23-time winner of the crown, jumped from a seventh-place finish last year to third spot with 38 points.

Collecting only five "A" victories and two "B" (novice) wins, Mt. Douglas placed at least one swimmer in the top four of most events for the winning margin.

Belmont, which finished second last year, placed fourth with 360 points and won the "B" aggregate trophy with 200 points.

Individual standouts in the "A" events were Allison Noble of Esquimalt, Karen and Janice Rushcall of Oak Bay, Nick Borelly of Mt. Douglas and John Ellis of St. Michael's University School.

Miss Noble snapped meet records in two of the three events she won. She posted marks of 1:10.3 in the 100-metre backstroke and 33.1 in the 50-metre backstroke and also finished first with a time of 2:36.4 in the 200-metre individual medley.

Karen Rushcall set a record of 29.8 seconds in the 50-metre freestyle, won the 50-metre butterfly and finished second to sister Janice in both the 100-metre freestyle and 100-metre butterfly. Janice also was runner-up in the 50-metre butterfly.

Stronger than ever . . .

That's Jack Lusk's early assessment of Western Home Lumber although the defending Canadian senior "A" women's basketball champions have lost a starting guard.

The addition of two newcomers and the return of Rose Jossul to the Western lineup should more than compensate for the loss of Wendy Grant.

With seven players from last season's national championship team returning, Lusk and assistant coach Mike Finlayson could not be accused of rebuilding.

Filling the few vacancies has been easy. The Westerns have added University of Victoria graduate Lorna McHattie and forward Kathy Shields, a former national team player who performed with Luarentian University in Sudbury last season.

In addition, Jossul's back. A regular two seasons ago, Mrs. Jossul missed last year's title march because of birth of a youngster.

The three will more than make up for the loss of Grant, who returns to compete on the mainland with Vancouver Buzzbombs.

The power is there, and it was obvious in Western's first two games in the six-team Victoria Women's League. Lusk's squad. Western Home scored 66-35 and 95-14 victories.

None of their rivals in the Victoria league are expected to be a threat to Western Home and the team's hopes of a return to the nationals may rest with exhibition competition.

Western Home launches its active exhibition campaign this weekend with two games in Seattle. They'll return to face Buzzbombs in a weekend series here on Nov. 20-21.

Buzzbombs and Simon Fraser University, Lusk feels, are expected to be Western Home's main threats in the provincial playdowns.

Tough Tests at UVic

Vikings play Victoria Scorpions Friday and Saturday night while Vikettes, who coasted to a 20-0 won-lost record in Canada West women's league play last season, meet Vancouver Buzzbombs, Canadian senior women's championsh two years ago.

Viking coach Ken Shields plans to start Lee Edmondson, Jim Duddridge and Chris Hebb up front with Robbie Parris and Grant Boland at guard.

"The guys are anxious to play somebody they haven't seen," Shields said of the Scorpions. "Mike Gaines has been rebounding well for them and we'll have to control him."

Shields also is looking forward to an anticipated matchup between the quick-moving Parris and Scorpions' Billy Robinson, a starter on Canada's national team in last summer's Olympics in Montreal.

Vikings should be well-briefed on their opponents' style. Shields is playing for Scorpions this year but will stay behind the Viking bench for Friday's game which starts at 7:30 p.m.

Vikette coach Mike Gallo has a tough act to follow after last year's success. However, he has an outstanding crop of rookies to fill voids created by the departure of Lorna McHattie, Edna Ritchie, Jan Nowell, Teresa Marcin and Laury Grimston, who have played out the eligibility.

This year's rookie crop includes Shelley Godfrey from Vic High, Marie Morrison from Mount Doug, Brenda Smith from Nanaimo, Yeta Ditella, Delphine Zarikoff and Patti Pesklevits all up from last season's Jayvees.

Gallo's returnees include Marg Mainwaring, selected last year to the national all-star team after compiling the best shooting average in the country, guard and playmaker Marie Ann Longmore, rebounder Ronni Hind, Lorraine Mosher, Jan Turner and Leslie Godfrey, whom Gallo rates the best guard in Canada.

Buzzbombs are unable to arrive for the usual Vikette starting time so Friday's game will begin at 9:30 p.m. following the Viking-Scorpion contest. Saturday's Vikette-Buzzbomb encounter starts at 7 p.m.

UVic Jayvees get their season under way by hosting the Senior "B" Victoria Athletics Friday at 4:30 p.m. and B.C. Institute of Technology Saturday at 5:30 p.m.

Unbeaten Leaders Extended by Blues

Victoria Athletics are still undefeated in the South Island Big Six Hockey League, but for a while Thursday night they weren't too certain what their status might be.

It took a third-period rally to overcome a second-period 3-2 lead by Chemainus Blues and take a 5-3 decision at George Pearkes Arena.

Athletics now have won eight games and tied one in nine games.

Gerry Caldwell scored two goals, both in the final period, to lead the A's. Other goal-getters were Brian Preston, Brian Hamilton and Dave Parenteau. Barry Bleakly, Terry Puska and Bob MacDonald scored for Chemainus.

Gorge Juveniles To See Seniors

Approximately 300 Gorge juvenile players will be admitted free when the two senior squads — Gorge Molsons and Gorge United — clash in a Vancouver Island Soccer League premier division match beginning at 2:15 p.m. Saturday at Royal Athletic Park.

Short-Handed Goals Key to Trio Tricks

Oak Bay Trios, it seems, don't really care who has the odd man on power plays in the South Island Junior "B" Hockey League.

The Trios Thursday night defeated Kerry Park Islanders of Mill Bay, 9-3, at the Oak Bay Recreation Centre, and they did it the hard way. They scored four of their goals while they were short-handed and only two with the man advantage.

Stan Alstadt was the biggest thief as he scored two of the short-handed goals.

Men's Volleyball Tourney at UVic

University of Victoria Vikings have drawn a talented field for a men's volleyball tournament Saturday in the McKinnon Building.

Other teams competing in the round-robin event are the University of British Columbia Thunderbirds, Vancouver Volleyball Club, B.C. Olympics and Vancouver City College.

The top two teams following round-robin play advance to the final.

Action starts at 9:30 a.m. and the final is scheduled for 3:30 p.m.

Juniors Lose In Overtime To James Bay

Winless in three previous games, the Junior Men forced James Bay Athletic Association to overtime before bowing out, 61-57. Teams were tied 53-53 in regulation time.

Ian Scott with 24 points and Mike Morrill with 17, sparked the James Bay attack. Charlied Hunter an Keith Brown each had 12 points for the Junior Men and Greg McInnis had 10.

JAMES BAY (61): Ian Scott 24, Mike Morrill 17, Clive Haas 6, Tom Child 4, Dave Anderson 4, John Campbell 2, Clare Anderson 2, Jim Merz 2.

JUNIOR MEN (57): Keith Brown 12, Charlie Hunter 12, Grey McGuinness 10; Ben Shotton 9; Bob Vanderford 7, Rich Hunt 2, Ken Wiens 2, Rens Davis 2, Joe Achadinha, Scott Hind, Pete Cavin, Kerry Leung.

Badminton Club Seeks Members

This is the last day for enrolling in the Victoria Canoe Club's canoeing course for beginners and those who want to sharpen up their skills.

The club puts this course on each year and it's a good way to get started in the boating game.

The non-profit course costs $15. This covers the rental of the Crystal Pool for four two-hour sessions. Another two sessions will be held outdoors.

Allan Roger is organizing this year's course and you can reach him at either 478-5187 or 387-6381. The first Crystal Pool session is set for Sunday evening.

VCC's Stan Luzzi is conducting another poling exercise on the Sooke River on Sunday. You don't have to be a member to join in. For more details give Stan a ring at 478-7262.

With the British pound so low, more and more sailing buffs are heading for the old country to get their dream boat and save a lot of money in the process.

John's wife, Nan, reports John picked up the 31-foot sloop Erla at Lymington in July on his retirement from the armed forces and, after having a crew with him as far as Bayonne in Spain, is working his way back single-handed.

At this point he should be halfway to the West Indies. John is bringing Erla home "in true Slocum fashion", bartering extra stores for things he needs and working along the way in order to cover expenses.

In Antigua, as an example, he hopes to work in the charter business for a few weeks in order to help pay for a haul-out and the next leg of Erla's trip, through the Panama Canal.

Out in the Sidney area, dinghy sailors of the Saanich Peninsula Sailing Association will be shorebound this Sunday. Instead of sailing they will be shoring up the ramp which was torn out by last weekend's high winds.

Also at Sidney, members of the Canoe Bay Sailing Club have another six-miler set for Saturday, starting near the government wharf at 1 p.m.

Alan Dickinson's Viking was over-all winner of Saturday's race, edging out Alex Marshall's Wisp, Will Jensen's Tiara III, Ken Martin's Sana, Gordie Inglis' Watermelon, Gordie Martman's Sunshine, Charles Afford's Mawingu, Roy Morahan's Starwagon, Daryl Foster's Tzonqua and Willi Fahning's Dominique.

The Royal Victoria Yacht Club will be joined by boats from the Turkey Head Sailing Association for a long-distrance race on Sunday. Start time is 10 a.m.

★ ★ ★

RVUC's Laser sailors will have series racing again at Cadboro Bay on Saturday. Start time is 1:30 p.m. Dave Teece won the first race last Saturday, beating out Doug Saturday, beating out Doug Gray and Peter Copeland. In the second sailout it was Charles Simpson, followed by Michael Williams and Peter.

★ ★ ★

The Esquimalt Squadron Canadian Forces Sailing Association will have racing for cruising class boats, Sailerettes and centreboarders at CFSA on Sunday, all starts being at 10:30 a.m.

Russ Gardner is CFSA's new commodore with Vic Wauthier as vice-commodore. Also on the new slate are rear-commodore Doug Pollard, fleet captain Dennis Parsons, secretary Rod Newman and treasurer Cliff Morris.

Late Arrivals Hot

LAKE BUENA VISTA, Fla. (AP) — Jerry McGee and Allen Miller, who formed their partnership just before the deadline, combined for a better-ball, nine-under-par 63 and a tie for the lead after Thursday's first round in the $200,000 national team golf championship.

They shared the top spot with rookies Bill Kratzert and Woody Blackburn who birdied their last three holes.

"I was going to play with Ken Harrelson, the baseball player, but he wasn't eligible," said McGee. "Allen and I didn't decide to play together until a couple of hours before the deadline."

"Jerry has played like gangbusters all year, won about $120,000," observed Miller. "That's hard to turn down."

One shot back in this event in which scoring is based on the better ball of each two-man team, were four other squads, headed by Ben Crenshaw and Eddie Pearce.

Also at 64 were veterans Mason Rudolph and Dan Sikes, Sam Adams and Don Iverson, and Joe Porter and Bob Zender.

Defending-champions Jim Colbert and Dean Refram were at 66. Former champions and highly-rated contenders Hubert Green and Mac McLendon were well back at 69.

The tournament, the last of the year on the pro tour, offers the winning team $40,000 as a first prize. But it won't help Crenshaw overtake the absent Jack Nickluas for the money-winning lead.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

Hooking 351 pounds of coho salmon out of season netted a Nanoose Bay man a $400 fine in Victoria provincial court Thursday.

Edward Almas pleaded guilty to a charge under B.C. fishery regulations.

Court was told Almas had "jumped the gun" by fishing on June 14, 1976, a day before the coho season opened.

Prosecutor Robert Hutchison said quite a number of fishermen are going out early to get a headstart on others who obey the regulations.

He said Almas was intercepted by the fisheries patrol vessel Atlin Post. When Almas' boat, the Pacific Prowler, was searched, 351 pounds of coho salmon were found in the freezer hold.

"The fishing regulations are there to protect the fish for all fishermen, and it isn't fair for some to jump the gun," Hutchison said.

Almas told court the fish would have died had he thrown them back.

Judge Blake Allan said a deterrent is necessary to keep others from doing the same thing.

Besides having to pay the $400 fine, Almas had to surrender the fish.

When Allan asked him when he had last worked, Dayton replied: "Two years ago."

Why so long ago, the judge asked.

Then followed the sentence of 60 hours of community work and a reminder from the judge that Dayton would risk charges of breach of probation if he failed to do the work.

★ ★ ★

Asked why he didn't go to the police station as required, Dayton said he was beaten up by the Saanich policeman who had arrested him.

Both the judge and prosecutor Robert Mulligan told him if he insisted on making such a serious allegation, he should follow it up by laying charges.

"It is unfair to the police officer to make the allegations without following them up," Mulligan said.

The officer in question wasn't named.

To a separate charge of possessing marijuana, Dayton pleaded not guilty and was remanded for trial until Feb. 16, 1977.

Joseph R. Martineau, 34, of no fixed address was fined $250 after pleading guilty to a charge of possessing hashish.

Martineau came to Victoria from Quebec recently and the procedings were translated into French by an interpreter.

When a Legal Aid lawyer suggested that the accused man would be able to understand what was going on in English, Allan insisted nevertheless that the interpreter be sworn in.

"I hope a Victoria resident would get the same treatment in Quebec," the judge said, SAID.

Two women who went on a shoplifting spree at Woolco on Sept. 7, were remanded for pre-sentence report and sentence until Nov. 25 after pleading guilty to a charge of theft over $200.

Patricia Reid, 27, of 804 Colville, and Sharon Nason, 23, of 710 Connaught, left the Woolco department store on Sept. 7 with goods valued at more than $400 without paying.

Court was told the two women stole a pair of children's boots, a pair of women's boots, jewelry, watches, ashtrays, blouses and other items.

Some of the items were placed in a Woolco shopping bag which was then stapled shut with an old Woolco receipt.

Allan looked somewhat bewildered when he asked: "Haven't these ladies heard of store detectives?"

★ ★ ★

They were James Robert McLaren, 53, of 959 Balmoral, fined $450, and Alan Gerald Zailo, 20, of 10 Stillwater Road, fined $400.

$150,000 Bails Out Achievement Centre

The trouble-plagued Greater Victoria Achievement Centre for the handicapped has been bailed out by the provincial government to the tune of $150,000.

But the Swan Lake centre in Saanich must still raise an additional $150,000 from private donations of it hopes to open as scheduled in about three months.

Centre society president Floyd Fairclough said Thursday he is confident the extra money could be raised through a public appeal.

Construction on the centre will continue while the society attempts to raise the extra cash.

Housing Minister Hugh Curtis said he is leaving the door open if the society has to come back to the government for more help.

He said the society could turn over the completed building to the B.C. Building Corporation, the Crown corporation formed earlier this year to buy or lease government buildings but, he said, the turnover was not a condition of the grant.

Total cost of the centre is estimated at $1.6 million, but Fairclough said the building could reach occupancy stage with only $1.3 million.

The centre has been funded by the provincial, federal and area municipal governments, community agencies and private donations.

Mandarin Oranges Arrive

The first shipment of Japanese mandarin oranges for the Christmas trade were to arrive aboard the Tunisian Reefer today in Vancouver.

A cargo of 640,000 cases were to be unloaded.

This is one of the earliest arrivals on record since oranges were first shipped from Japan to China more than 50 years ago.

The Tunisian Reefer will be followed by seven more ships during the next few weeks. A total shipment of some 4 million cases is expected.

Family Council Urged for B.C.

RICHMOND (CP) — Establishment of a permanent British Columbia Council for the Family involving government, religious groups and community agencies was called for Thursday by delegates attending a conference on family.

More than 240 persons attended the conference, cosponsored by the provincial human resources department and 70 religious groups from throughout the province.

The conference has been a year-long process in three distinct phases aimed at finding out what the people of B.C want for the support and well-being of their families.

Phase one consisted of a three-day meeting in Victoria in November, 1975, when about 200 delegates and consultants from B.C. identified major issues for study.

The second phase consisted of a province-wide study of those issues by groups and individuals who reported back at the third phase of the conference held in Richmond this week.

Delegates called on the federal government to allow Indian women to retain their Indian status when marrying non-Indians.

A resolution calling for the introduction of a guaranteed annual income program was approved by only eight votes.

MENTAL PATIENT BEATEN?

COQUITLAM (CP) — The victim of an alleged beating at Riverview mental hospital was absent from Coquitlam provincial court Thursday when a psychiatric nurse appeared on an assault charge.

Alex Tyszkow, a patient who suffered a hairline nose fracture in the alleged assault, was absent because doctors had decided he is mentally incompetent and unfit to testify.

Judge J. R. Groberman was told that other patients, who claim they witnessed the alleged incident, were also absent because doctors decided that they too were unfit to give evidence.

The incident, which allegedly occurred March 21, became public knowledge when a patient telephoned the Vancouver Sun and said he had witnessed an assault on Tyszkow, the judge was told.

The report, which was investigated by hospital authorities, caused Mrs. Therese Spitzer, chairman of the newly-formed 12-member Committee of Concern for the Rights of Mental Patients, to lay an information against Ashby.

Minutes before the hearing began Thursday, because Mrs. Spitzer's information might have been invalid, lawyers re-laid the information in the name of Lloyd Warren, the patient who phoned the Sun.

Warren, the only prosecution eyewitness to the alleged assault, told the court he has since been released from Riverview.

Warren said he saw Ashby dragging Tyszkow into a washroom. He said the two men came out and Ashby handed Tyszkow a mop and pail and ordered him to wash the floor.

Warren said Tyszkow refused to mop the floor, sat down in a chair and started to roll a cigarette.

"Ashby hauled off and hit him between the eyes," Warren alleged. "He fell down unconscious and Ahsby put the boots to him three or four times."

Questioned further, Warren said Ashby hit Tyszkow with his bunched fist and kicked the patient in the ribs three or four times.

Ashby in later testimony denied all of Warren's allegations and said Tyszkow grabbed him by the throat from behind and the patient fell during the struggle.

Dr. Alice Creamer, a Riverview psychiatrist, testifying on Warren's competence at the time of the alleged incident, said Warren's condition, which is not a disease of the mind, would not impede his ability to related the facts objectively.

The case continues today.

SEOUL (Rueter) — At least 64 fishermen have drowned and about 400 are missing following storms which have swept Korea's eastern coast since last week.

Man Fined $500 On Pot Charge

A 19-year-old Victoria man was fined $500 and placed on probation for one year on Thursday after pleading guilty in county court to possession of marijuana.

Randall Robert Wright had been accused of possession of marijuana for the purpose of trafficking in Central Saanich Aug. 21, 1975.

But when the jury panel assembled for his two-day trial, he pleaded guilty to the lesser included offence of simple possession. The plea was accepted by Crown counsel Gordon MacDonald and Judge Leslie Cashman.

Defence counsel David Lisson told the court Wright had been affected by an "acrimonious and lengthy" marital breakup of his parents and has an older brother with a number of criminal convictions, including four drug offences.

However, his "lifestyle has changed" and he is working full-time at Pedder Bay Marina where he is assistant manager, Lisson said.

MacDonald, who said two pounds of marijuana had been found at Wright's home, suggested a substantial fine and probation would be in order.

The judge, in addition to the fine and probation, ordered Wright not to use illegal drugs and not to associate with known drug users.

"I am satisfied you have learned a lesson," he said.

$2M Frees Kidnapped Supermarket Heir

MUENSTER — A kidnapped West German supermarket heir and Olympic horseman was freed unharmed today for a $2-million ransom, police said.

Hendrik Snoek, 27, a reserve rider on West Germany's Olympic equestrian team at Montreal, was released after being held two days.

He was assistant to his father in the management of the Ratie supermarket chain in Westphalia.

Police said Snoek was snatched from his Muenster apartment early Wednesday and released at noon today near the Hessian town of Hoerborn.

WASHINGTON — President Gerald Ford has accepted the resignation of Richard C. Helms as ambassador to Iran.

In a letter dated Oct. 9, the former CIA director told the president he was resigning.

In accepting Helms' resignation after his 34 years in government service, Ford said "you carried out your duties with dedication and skill," and praised the "many insights" Helms provided in his diplomatic work.

SAN FRANCISCO — John R. Hartman, 46, a city gardener, was the victim of muggers who prefer dogs to wallets.

Hartman told police Thursday that he was taking a stroll with his 7-month-old bull terrior Grendel when he was tackled by two youths.

They knocked him to the pavement, struck him, kicked him, slashed him with a knife and then ran off with Grendel.

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. — A man accused of trying to sell marijuana knocked on the wrong door.

Deputy sheriff Bill Rehm said he and state policeman Jim Woods were in his apartment earlier this week when the man came to the door and said, "I heard you would like to buy some grass."

Rehm said the man came inside and took out several samples of Marijuana. He offered to sell some for $10, Rehm said, and at that point, the officers showed their badges and arrested the man.

CAIRO — Omar Sharif, winding up his first visit to his homeland in 12 years, says President Anwar Sadat "made me promise to come home when we met last year in Washington at a White House reception."

The actor accompanied a bevy of French models for a charity fashion show arranged by Sadat's wife Jihann. He said President Gerald Ford introduced Sadat to him at a state dinner.

Now that he has broken the ice with his first visit, Sharif plans to come back next month and possibly to do a film for Egyptian television "but not an Egyptian movie."

"The movie would be shown abroad and I have to maintain my standards."

Remarks like that annoyed many Egyptian writers and movie people who remember Sharif as an out-of-work actor then known as Michel Shalhoub ganging around Groppi's, a popular Cairo cafe.

CLEVELAND, Tenn. — Country music star Hank Snow will hold a concert here Dec. 9 to benefit abused children, the Bradlee County sheriff's office says.

Snow has written Gov. Ray Blanton and the sheriff, deploring the beating death of a 4-year-old Melisha Gibson. Sgt. Robert Lawson wrote back asking Snow to give a concert with proceeds going to build a new shelter for abused children.

"Hank Snow called, told us just to set a date and get a location, and he and some of his friends would be here," Lawson said Thursday. "He said he had been on tour in western Canada and had just come home to find our letter."

Lawson said he has reserved the 4,500-seat Cleveland State Community College field house for the concert Dec. 9.

BALTIMORE — It was a dream come true for the Rev. Sylvester Fowler, the 68-year-old pastor of Saints Pentecostal church.

Last August he dreamed he bought a newspaper from "a mysterious man I didn't ven recognize," who gave him a free Maryland lottery ticket.

Fowler told the man he didn't ask for the ticket, but the man replied: "It's there. Take it."

Fowler had his dream analysed, and was told to buy a lottery ticket. On Wednesday night, he won $177,600 in Maryland's 1776 bonus lottery.

Then Const. Dave Debolt confronted the young motorist.

"I'm arresting you for possession of stolen property," said Debolt.

"What do you mean?" the youth protested.

"I said I'm arresting you for possession of stolen property," the officer repeated.

"What for?"

CIA Blew Bank Burglar's Cover

PARIS — Albert Spaggiari, the ex-paratrooper charged with organizing the "bank robbery of the century," was captured because he bragged to the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency about his feat, French police sources said today.

Spaggiari, 40, was arrested on Oct. 27 and charged with masterminding the gang that tunnelled into a bank in Nice through the city's sewer system in July and got away with up to $10 million.

Spaggiair said he gave his share of the haul to an underground international anti-Communist organization.

French police investigators said that they were first put on his trail by a tip the CIA transmitted through Interpol shortly after Spaggiari visited the United States in September.

The sources gave this account:

Spaggiari went to New York, Miami and Washington, D.C., apparently looking for a restaurant to buy with part of the stolen money. When this fell through, he went to CIA headquarters in Washington and offered to break in to any embassy the agency wanted burgled.

When CIA officials asked for his references as a burglar, Spaggiari boasted that he organized the Nice robbery.

WHO'S MONDALE?

PLAINS, Ga. — Walter F. Mondale got his first taste Thursday of what it's like to be U.S. vice president.

It was billed as a joint news conference by president-elect Jimmy Carter and Mondale.

Girl Killed

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — A 15-year-old girl was killed Wednesday when the car she was a passenger in left the highway 17 miles south of here. Police said the girl fell from the car. Her name was withheld.

Peron Case Dismissed

BUENOS AIRES — A federal appeals court has ordered prosecutors to drop an embezzlement charge against former president Isabel Peron on grounds she had already been tried and cleared.

The court Thursday sharply criticized a decision last Dec. 30 to absolve Mrs. Peron of embezzling $740,000 in charity funds, but said she could not be tried twice on the same charge.

She was ordered kept under arrest, however, to face other charges.

The judge who handed down the decision clearing Mrs. Peron last Dec. 30 was fired by the military government when the Peron administration was overthrown three months later.

Mme. Mao To Face Trial

PEKING (Reuter) — China plans a state trial of Mao Tse-tung's widow, Chiang Ching, and other members of the Shanghai "gang of four" accused of plotting to seize power in Peking, Chinese officials told a visiting delegation here Thursday.

Observers said a secret trial of the four leftist radicals appeared more likely than a public hearing.

An informed source said the officials told a delegation from Finland that the four former Politburo members were under house arrest and would eventually go on trial on charges of plotting a coup in the aftermath of Chairman Mao's death nearly two months ago.

At another meeting Thursday, the source said, the Finnish delegation was told that investigators are trying to find out whether the four disgraced leaders had "illicit relations" with the Soviet Union.

268 Killings Suspected

The deaths occurred at a clinic where another 259 persons are said to have died in questionable circumstances.

Frans Hooijmaijers, chief nurse of a psychiatric clinic for elderly people in nearby Kerkrade, was arrested in August, 1975, after an autopsy on one of his patients disclosed large traces of insulin, a hormone which controls sugar metabolism. Injections of insulin are a common treatment for diabetes.

Under police interrogation, Hooijmaijers is alleged to have admitted giving the fatal injections because he wanted to end the suffering of the patients.

However, in court last May he said he did not intend to kill anyone. The head of the court then suspended the hearing and ordered further police inquiries, which took five months.

At the reopening of the trial this week, the public prosecutor again alleged that Hooijmaijers intentionally killed the nine patients. The court was told that another 259 persons at the same clinic had died in questionable circumstances.

Saanich Hopefuls Agree: No Pay Hikes

If campaign promises mean anything, Saanich council won't be voting itself pay increases for a long time and will negotiate its own contracts with its municipal employees.

This was made clear at an all-candidates meeting in Claremont high school Thursday night. Between 150 and 200 people attended the meeting sponsored by the Cordova Bay Community Association.

Three incumbents are among 10 candidates seeking four aldermanic seats. All three, aldermen Mary Casilio, Maurice Johnson and Roy Wootten said they had been against the council pay hikes. Johnson said he had refused his.

Ian Cass said "the pay increases are a small matter in dollars but a big matter in principles. With that sort of example it's hard to negotiate a tight contract."

Jack Fry said he would push for no council pay increases for two years.

All three incumbents said they had been against Saanich's decision to negotiate contracts through the Greater Victoria Labor Relations Association.

Hubert Beyer said council's decision not to negotiate its own labor contracts is "an admission of guilt that they can't handle it themselves".

All candidates went on record wanting to preserve the rural atmosphere of Saanich and the retention of the agricultural land reserve protection.

However, Wootten said the controversial Royal Oak industrial park is necessary to broaden the tax base. He said if the land is used for single-family homes it will net $259,000 in taxes, compared to the $700,000 an industrial park will produce.

John Mika said council should retain the Royal Oak acreage in the ALR to maintain the character of the municipality and should look to the provincial government for a better financial break.

"There is money going begging. We should get justice from the provincial government," Mika said.

He said former Saanich mayor, Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis, should be asked to support Saanich's reimbursement for its part of the University of Victoria property, as well as other provincial properties in the municipality.

Richard Gauthier said council is misleading residents when it states the Royal Oak industrial complex is 120 acres. He said figures are being juggled and the acreage is actually 160.

Candidates agreed the days of sewage outfalls are numbered and outfalls should be replaced with proper treatment plants. Robert Cameron said, however, the electorate must decide if it is willing to pay the higher costs, not council. Gordon Cowan said he favors going ahead with treatment plants.

All candidates agreed municipal business should be conducted in public, except for matters involving land acquisition and personnel.

Mika said Saanich should advertise full agendas of all council and committee meetings a week before so residents know what is to take place. Minutes of all meetings should be publicized a week later to keep residents informed.

All candidates promised to keep property tax increases to a minimum. Fry said people on welfare, if physically and mentally fit, should be given first choice of municipal jobs, such as garbage collection, when vacancies occur.

Ottawa Planning to Block U.S. Subpoena Powers

OTTAWA (CP) — Energy Minister Alastair Gillespie said today he intends to take measures to prevent United States courts from taking evidence out of Canada "through another back door."

The minister was referring to reports that the U.S. courts would ask the Ontario Supreme Court to gather evidence here on allegations that Canada took part in setting up a world uranium cartel.

Last month Mr. Gillespie changed regulations under the Atomic Energy Control Act to prevent the removal of evidence held by companies in Canada to meet subpoenas served in the U.S.

"I'm now taking advice from the law officers of the Crown on what further action can be taken," he said as he entered the Commons.

Asked if he intended further measures to block the move, the minister replied: "Certainly."

The U.S. justice department said this fall it was seeking information held by Gulf Minerals Ltd., Rio Algom Mines Ltd. and Dennison Mines Ltd., companies associated with firms in the U.S. The department said it wanted information on the allegations of a cartel no matter where such data was held.

Mr. Gillespie said he saw that as an attempt to impose U.S. laws on Canada, a proposal he strongly opposes.

The Canadian government is also upset over the whole idea of the U.S. complaining a cartel had been formed.

The Mercedes-Benz Diesel:

You'll find it a thoroughly sensible automobile that can help take some of the sting out of the rising cost of fuel

PERHAPS IT'S TIME for you to join the many thousands of Canadians who drive a Mercedes-Benz Diesel. Undoubtedly they have found it a sensible solution to many driving conditions.

Here are just five of its many benefits, and then we'll debunk some of the myths that still linger about the Diesel.

1. Good mileage

The Mercedes-Benz Diesel is a genuine five passenger automobile with the kind of sensible mileage that can offset rising fuel costs.

According to U.S. EPA laboratory tests, model 300D can get up to 29 mpg in city driving; up to 37 mpg on the open highway (Figures adjusted for Imperial gallons). Mileage you get may differ due to the way you drive and road conditions.

Based on these U.S. EPA figures, the 300D with a full tank could take you over 600 miles on the highway and over 450 miles in the city.

2. No expensive tune-ups

Unlike gasoline engines, Diesels have no fussy ignition systems. They don't have points, condensers, spark plugs, carburetors or distributors. Parts that aren't there don't need adjustments, never break down and don't need replacement.

So you can forget about those often costly summer and winter tune-ups!

3. A clean burning engine

Virtually all gasoline engines are required to mount an emissions-cleaning device that reduces performance as well as pollutants. Not so a Diesel. It is an exceptionally clean-burning engine because it burns its fuel much more efficiently than a gasoline one. You never pay an ecological penalty when driving a Diesel.

And because it doesn't need an emissions-cleaning device, there's one more part that can't go wrong.

4. Performance, comfort, safety

The 240D and 300D are comfortable 5-passenger automobiles with the quiet luxury and elegance you expect from Mercedes-Benz.

In every major appointment, the 300D is equal to the famous Mercedes-Benz 280 Sedan. And it offers performance never before associated with a Diesel automobile.

As with all our models, safety comes first. A rigid steel safety cell encloses the entire passenger compartment—and there is evidence of the decades of Mercedes-Benz safety engineering everywhere.

5. A lasting investment

Mercedes-Benz has a well-deserved reputation for providing lasting value. The record shows that our automobiles have a better resale value than other standard or luxury cars.

This welcome reassurance, along with the fact that a Diesel engine can last far longer than a gasoline one, makes a Mercedes-Benz Diesel an exceptional investment.

Debunking some myths

Mercedes-Benz introduced the world's first production Diesel passenger car in 1936. In the four decades since then, we have sold over one million and refined our Diesels to include as standard equipment, fully independent suspension, power steering, central locking system, 4-wheel disc brakes, and on the 300 Diesel automatic transmission, AM/FM radio, electrically operated windows, cruise control and air conditioning.

Yet some myths still persist.

Item. "Diesels make an odd noise." Not an odd noise, a different noise, and only at idle. This different sound is a natural result of the Diesel's unusual combustion process. Underway, it's virtually impossible to hear the difference between a Mercedes-Benz Diesel and most gasoline engines.

Item. "Diesel fuel is hard to find." The fact is there are thousands of stations offering it across Canada. After all, trucks need diesel fuel too! And with the Mercedes-Benz large fuel tanks (17.2 gallons) and good mileage, trips to a service station can be far apart.

A sensible automobile?

Most decidedly! But we invite you to test drive a Mercedes-Benz Diesel so you can form your own opinion. We think you'll agree with thousands of other Canadians that it is a sensible solution to today's driving conditions.

For your test drive, and for our 46-page illustrated brochure, see your authorized dealer. Or write: Mercedes-Benz of Canada Limited, 849 Eglinton Ave. E., Toronto, Ontario M4G 2L5. Leasing and European Delivery Plans are available.

Mercedes-Benz
"The best or nothing"

NOTE: One of the purposes of the U.S. EPA testing is to allow scientific comparison of gasoline consumption between different makes of car; EPA figures do not necessarily indicate the exact mpg that the average driver can obtain.

Some Questions About TV Video Games

By LYNNE GORDON

Most Canadians became hooked on TV video games when they played them in pubs and recreational areas. And right now this electronic game is being heavily promoted as the ideal gift for anyone from 6-60.

Before you succumb to any sales pitch, make sure you ask some solid questions.

First of all there seems to be a price war in Toronto, despite the rumors that there won't be enough at Christmas to supply the demand. To add to the confusion the electronic game is being packaged as both a toy and an adult game. Some manufacturers are concerned about this since it's a sophisticated piece of equipment and needs a technician for repairs.

At the moment there are about seven manufacturers in Canada and there can be a wide variance in price, quality and operation.

The price of a set can be influenced by many factors — the combination of games offered, the quality of the plastic console and the price of the auxiliary equipment available. Prices change daily and can vary from $49 to $300 or more.

Most consumers are familiar with the simplest application where the video game transforms the television screen into an electronic playing field. The game is usually hooked up to the antenna switch box where it is left permanently.

In some less-expensive models, you have to dismantle the set each time you finish playing before you can use the telvision set normally. This can be a deterrent to playing.

Once the game is hooked up, you dial a UHF station or an open VHF channel and start to play via a remote control box.

For example, if you are playing ping pong or tennis, the ball (actually a light-dot) files across the screen and you or your opponent try to hit it with a paddle of light. If you miss, the ball disappears off the screen, the score changes and the ball automatically reappears until the game is finished, usually at 15 points.

Some models offer a combination of games such as ping pong, squash, handball, target practice and solo practice. In a sophisticated model, you can change the size of the paddles and the speed of the ball. You should also have the sound effects when the paddle contacts the ball.

Color is now available but many consumers don't realize that a color game must be hooked up to a color set or it will only produce black and white image.

The price then increases even more if you want a game that allows four players instead of two.

The more expensive sets are incorporating quiz questions and are being pushed as an "educational" tool.

The variety available boggles the mind and some manufacturerers expect tremendous changes in 1977 that may make some of the present sets seem obsolete. One manufacturer intends to market a basic model, housing a variety of games. But each year a number of extra games will be created that can be attached to the basic model. For the immediate future, he is looking at 28 new functions.

It pays to check the quality of the plastic console you are buying — the knobs, moulding and accessories all contribute to the durability of the set. Nothing can be more frustrating than sending the game back for repair.

Even check different models from the same manufacturer, since there can be a difference in quality control. For a true comparison, try to check sets side by side.

Be sure you check the warranty on any set you buy — have it spelled out carefully and be sure all promises are written. Don't accept anything unless you understand what is covered — parts, labor and the time necessary for the set to be out of your home. Does the store back the set or just the manufacturer.

Will the set have to leave the country to be repaired or can it be handled in Canada. One company is Canadian based, while most are from the United States and the Far East.

According to the television repair industry there is no danger that the game will damage your television screen.

Although the game is suggested for any age group, there is some concern over buying the game for a child under 10. Some children may have problems with co-ordination because they have spatial, visual and motor difficulties and at that age, a child may not find the game relaxing, act too competitive and end up feeling frustrated.

There is also some concern that the game is too structured and mysterious — a sense of magic about the balls appearing from nowhere. This can result in a child taking one more step back from reality, actually believing that he can automatically become a "ping pong or tennis" champ.

It's Cheaper, Easier Now to Get 'Spliced'

By JAMES H. HUSSEY

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — Getting "spliced," as local seamen say, was never much of a problem for Newfoundlanders. Now it's easier than ever, and it's cheap.

As of this month, a new Civil Marriages Act allows civil marriages throughout the province. The licence costs $10 and not more than $25 can be charged for performing the ceremony itself.

The act is for everyone, whether Christian or not, and no particular form of ceremony is required.

There will be a licence issuer in just about every community in the province. Besides clergymen, those authorized to perform marriage ceremonies will include marriage commissioners, the mayors of St. John's and Corner Brook and district and family court judges and magistrates.

The act requires that a marriage commissioner must be at least 19 years old, that no marriage be performed for anyone under 16 unless special consideration is given in case of pregnancy, and that no one be married while under the influence of alcohol or drugs.

No form of ceremony is prescribed but certain statements must be included, such as an avowal by both parties that they know of no lawful impediment to the marriage and a solemn declaration of love.

The issuers get $7 out of each $10 licence fee, and it may get to be quite a sideline for some commissioners.

Whether fewer wedding bells will be ringing from church towers remains to be seen. Newfoundlanders have often been united outside the church but always by the clergy and most couples have preferred church weddings.

Clergymen of the four major churches in the province — Roman Catholic, Anglican, United and Salvation Army — have different views but most say the new law is a step in the right direction.

Justice Minister T. Alex Hickman said the new legislation was "long overdue and has been used in other provinces for years." The act was passed by the government in 1974 but was not proclaimed until recently.

The civil marriage ceremony will be a boon for non-Christians. Previously they had to join a Christian church or travel out of the province to get married.

There are indications that an increasing number of Newfoundlanders no longer think any form of marriage ceremony — either civil or church — is necessary for two people to live together.

"NO-FAULT" ARGUING: KEY TO A SUCCESSFUL MARRIAGE

The idea of "winning" marital conflicts is an illusion, since one partner's "victory" inevitably becomes a loss for both. That's because the attitude of "winning" an argument reduces a marriage to a power struggle ... and when power becomes the prevailing force, love is diminished. There's bound to be some conflict in every marriage, but the November issue of Reader's Digest shows you how to avoid letting those conflicts turn your marriage into an armed camp. Don't miss "NO-FAULT" ARGUING: KEY TO A SUCCESSFUL MARRIAGE, just one of more than 40 articles and features in the November issue of Reader's Digest. At your newsstand today!

CARPET CLEANER

The Formula

Carpets can be a reservoir for holding all sorts of dirt and bacteria. This accumulation enters our homes via shoes, boots, wind and on the feet and coats of our pets.

We can't live in a sterile void of course, so our natural body immune system guards us against bacteria up to a certain point. However, we've all heard that "cleanliness is next to Godliness" and carpets, being a holding point for dirt and soil, are a good place to start the clean-up.

There are several options. (1) A cleaning service can be called in, (2) cleaning machines can be rented, or (3) you can do it yourself which is the lowest cost option "by a country mile."

If you elect to do it yourself, you'll need three cups WHEAT FLOUR, one and one-fourth cups MINERAL OIL, one tablespoon ALUMINUM STEARATE (found at drug stores), one tablespoon SALICYLIC ACID (found in paint stores or chemical supply houses), and one and three-fourths cups water. Mix the flour and water to form a paster, and mix in the aluminum stearate and salicylic acid into the paste, and then add the mineral oil in a slow stream, stirring constantly.

To use, brush paste into surface and, after a few minutes, remove with damp cloth or sponge. Do this over sections of the carpet, one at a time. NOTE: Because there are so many different fibres, test in a small inconspicuous area before cleaning the entire capret. Store in glass, metal or plastic container.

Mess Allowed

NEW YORK (CP) — Hair styles this year demand dexterity to fold, wrap, knot and twist. But hairspray is unnecessary because a few straggly ends make the difference between this season' look and the old starched and tethered upsweep. For accent, add feathers, tassels, braids, combs and picks. One hairdresser said: "Be imaginative. Be bold. Dare to be messy."

'Virtue Not Always Own Reward'

MONTREAL (CP) — Virtue is not always its own reward, doctors say.

For example, a man who smokes two packs a day, eats without heed to cholesterol or calories, exercises little and sleeps irregularly can live to a ripe old age.

A jogger, health-food addict though he is, may die at an early age, victim of heart disease, lunch cancer or the like.

In other words, it all may be predetermined. One's fate may be one's genes. Or so medical researchers speculate.

Dr. Charles Scriver, a geneticist at the Montreal Children's Hospital, says that if screening programs could be developed to identify populations facing risk, then preventive medicine would be better used.

He and other geneticists believe new advances in genetics might change health care within the next generation.

Genetics, the science that deals with laws of reproduction and heredity, is exploding.

Gregor Johann Mendel, the Austrian monk who bred and interbred pea plants through many generations, published Mendel's laws of heredity in 1866. But little was done in the field for many years thereafter.

Only within the last two decades has genetics started to concentrate on the understanding and control of the thousands of genetic diseases afflicting mankind.

Dr. C. O. Carter of the Institute of Child Health in London foresees four future developments.

Furthest in the future, he said, is the restoration of mutant-changed-gene to a normal form. This might be done at the chromosome level or at the level of deoxyribonucleic acid DNA — the basic chemical of the genes.

Next is the replacement of missing material by a foreign gene which would overcome the effect of many diseases and accidents. He said it would take a generation to master this technique.

The third development would be transplantation of tissue from a normal person to one with a genetic defect to overcome the defect. Dr. Carter said this might be accomplished within 10 years.

Who Started The Business Of Shaving?

NEW YORK (CP) — Beards and moustaches have always been in and out of style.

Exactly when and why men started shaving is not known. But archeological research has revealed such painful shaving methods as ripping off the whiskers with two pieces of flint and singeing them with a red-hot iron plate. Even sharks' teeth were used and primitive men probably yanked out the hairs forcibly.

It was the Egyptians, some 4,000 years ago, who introduced bronze razors.

"When you think that whiskers have been tweezed, plucked and ground off, it's not surprising that the fashion for beards flourished for centuries," says Leonard Lauder, president of the Aramis cosmetic firm.

Sometimes beards were removed for practical purposes. Alexander the Great ordered his soldiers to shave to prevent the enemy from grabbing them by the beard in hand-to-hand fighting. But in general, beards have flourished more often than clean-shaven styles.

A quick look at the kings of England, either from tomb effigies or portraits, shows that more were bearded than clean shaven. And they set the styles. Alfred the Great, who died in 901, was heavily bearded. Beards were worn by most rulers up to the 15th century but with more fashionable styling. Then came beardless Henry V and three clean-shaven successors before Henry VIII grew his moustache and fringe beard running up to the ears.

Elizabethan nobles were elegantly bearded but the chins of the first two Stuart monarchs and Oliver Cromwell were bare. Then Charles II introduced the pointed Van Dyke, named for the artist who painted many nobles wearing the same style.

Hanoverian kings shaved their faces until Victoria's time when Prince Albert introduced a neat moustache and Edward VII brought the beard back into fashion. His son George V was the last bearded British monarch as Edward, the popular Prince of Wales, reversed the trend.

Public barber shops sprang up in the 18th and 19th centuries. In 1902, better-class tonsorial parlors in Paris were advertising a shave for five cents, a haircut for 15 cents and dyeing hair, whiskers or beard for 20 cents.

The first known safety razor was desinged by a Frenchman in 1771. In 1895 it was improved to a true safety razor with blade by a salesman named King C. Gillette. A patent for the electric razor was issued in 1928.

Probably one reason men have remained clean-shaven for such a long period has been the improvement not only in razors but in shaving procedures. Originally, barber shops lathered, shaved and hot-towelled their customers, giving every face the same treatment whether the skin was tough or tender.

Today there are foams, creams and lotions to make shaving easier and more comfortable.

"We have formulated different products for different types of skin and also for different types of beard growth," says Lauder. "There are softeners for stubborn beards, smoothers for before and after shaving and after-shave preparations which run the gamut from mild to bracing."

Men who use electric shavers have not been neglected. A preshave lotion lubricates and sets up the beard and an after-shave preparation tones and refreshes the skin.

New Wine from Blueberry

MONTREAL (CP) — A new aperitif-type wine, described as "typically Quebecois," is on sale here and its origin goes back to the beginnings of New France.

The wine is called Dubleuet and it is concocted from the blueberry the French call it bleuet which grows in profusion in the barrens of Quebec.

Selected blueberries are crushed and fermented. After filtration, the blueberry wine is mixed with 18 herbs and spices — the exact mixture is a well-guarded secret.

The aperitif has an alcoholic strength of 15.5 per cent by volume. It is described by connoisseurs as not too sweet, has a bouquet and pleases those who appreciate a vermouth before a meal.

The use of the blueberry in alcoholic drinks goes back to the early 1600s when the first colonists arrived in Quebec from France. Lacking the grapes of their homeland, they turned to wild berries for drink.

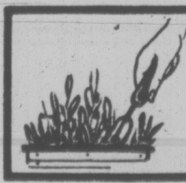
Camille Cote, president of Julac, Inc., of Dolbeau in the Lake St. John district, which produces the wine, thinks the origin goes farther back than the early French settlers.

Five years ago, Jean-Paul Binet, then industrial commissioner for the district and now general manager of Julac, became convinced of the commercial possibilities of a blueberry wine.

After research by Laval University workers produced encouraging results, a group of 21 Lake St. John businessmen formed a company to build a $500,000 winery.

By 1975 they were producing a dry table wine called Village Des Peres. The next step was the aperitif, Dubleuet.

Although Dubleuet has been on the market through stores of the Quebec liquor commission for five months, it was launched officially only this fall.



indoor gardens

DEAR LYNN AND JOEL: What can you tell me about Bio-Dynamic Gardening? What I've heard makes a lot of sense. Is it the same as Organic? — Dave (father and mother to 43 house plants).

DEAR MOTHER AND FATHER DAVE: Organic gardening is done primarily with compost, while bio-dynamics is a "smorgasbord of nutrients" for the soil. The difference is soil preparation. The bio-dynamic method was introduced in America during the early '30s by Rudolf Steiner (see "The Secret Life of Plants" by Peter Tompkins and Christopher Bird, Avon Pocketbooks), long before there was organic gardening and farming. Bio means life and dynamic means energy.

Bio-dynamics combines the study and application of those forces and energies that promote life and growth. Steiner pointed out the need for recognizing the total environment of the plant. Bio-dynamics is a method of farming that relies on active participation by the farmer. There is a lot to learn and unlearn. Changing growing patterns and habits and methods is necessary and a whole new understanding will be gained. Bio-dynamics balances the soil, which balances the food, which keeps us in balance.

It takes more time and effort than standard methods of gardening, but the efforts are extremely rewarding year after year. For more information, send a self-addressed stamped envelope to the Bio-dynamic Farming and Gardening Assn., Inc., 17240 Los Alimos St., Granada Hills, Calif. 91341.

MORE SOAP FOR HARD WATER

LOMBARD, Ill. (AP) — Hard water requires more soap than soft water, according to the Water Quality Assn.

In hard water, soap or detergent acts as a chemical means of softening the water. The harder the water, the more soap or detergent must be added to overcome the hardness. Only when the hardness has been overcome can the soap or detergent actually start cleaning.

In soft water, the cleaning process can begin immediately, saving 26 per cent to 68 per cent in the cost of cleaning materials. The annual savings fo ar typical family of four is $9.61 to $57.80. The association reported these figures after a 12-month study.

THE MOTHER EARTH NEWS® ...it tells you how

Mother reader Jim Bush was banging away with a hammer at the laths of a barn he was disassembling when an old sharecropper (one of rural America's many undiscovered geniuses) happened along and showed him a simple homemade lath puller he'd devised. The tool — which was made from a few pieces of scrap iron (the kind most homesteaders have lying around somewhere) — really speeded up the work.

If you spend a fair amount of time tearing down old houses and barns for their lumber, perhaps you ought to consider making one of these lath pullers too. All you need are (1) a two-foot length of one-half- to one-inch-diameter steel rod or pipe, (2) three flat pieces of iron each measuring about six inches by two inches by a quarter of an inch and (3) access to a welding rig.

First, weld the end of the rod to the center of one piece of strap iron, forming a "T." Then weld the two remaining pieces of metal to the top of the "T" at about a 45° angle in the manner shown in the accompanying photographs. Leave a good 2½ inches between the two prongs so that they'll easily straddle a two-by-four.

To use the puller, simply place the two prongs underneath a lath and rest the crosspiece of the "T" on the beam to which the lath is attached. Push down on the handle and the prongs will pry the lath loose . . . no muss, no fuss, no broken slats.

Continue this procedure from one end of the strip of wood to the other until it's completely free.

You'll find that the puller — besides speeding up the job — rarely splits laths (unlike a hammer). Thus, you end up with more usable lumber at the end of the day!

DEAR ABBY: I'm 26 and the mother of two boys, ages 3 and 5. My mother, a widow, lives about an hour's drive from me, but I refuse to visit her again because of the condition of her house.

She NEVER washes her kitchen and bathroom floors! The toilet dosn't work, and the stench is unbearable. She has so many cats running around you can't count them, and you can smell their urine even before you open her front door. (She burns candles to mask the odor.)

I don't claim to be a perfect housekeeper, but I can't talk tolerate filth and germs. I'm so afraid my children will pick up something there. My oldest son refused to sit on her toilet. I cleaned up the place a year ago but she hasn't done a thing to it since. The last time we were there she wanted to give us dinner, but we lied and said we just ate. (My husband won't even have a glass of water there!)

Abby, I've done all I can. I feel guilty not visiting her, but I just can't stand the way she lives. Am I wong? — ONLY DAUGHTER.

DEAR DAUGHTER: Yes! Your mother must be sick to live with the conditons you describe. Please pack her up immediately and take her to a doctor for a thorough physical and mental examination. She should not be living alone!

DEAR ABBY: How do you tell your ex-mother-in-law who insists that you are still part of her "family" that you don't want to be?

I hate to come right out and insult the woman, but I may have to. I have been divorced from her dauther for three years and am now married to another woman, but whenever my former mother-in-law sees me, she calls me "Son." She keeps trying to be friendly with my present wife, telling her that she is also now part of her family.

This irritates me to no end, Abby. Thre is no religious reason for her ignoring my divorce since she is an atheist. — BOTHERED

DEAR BOTHERED: If she wants to consider you and your wife part of her "family," let her. YOU know better, but nothing will be gained by insulting her or making an issue of it.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 40-year-old attractive divorcee who has been going with this 59-year-old widower for the last two years. He has five grown children and I have four. My youngest is 18, and she recently got her own apartment.

I really love this man, but he says he will never marry me. He has money and he's very generous. We've taken several nice trips together, and he is fun to be with. But I have the feeling his children don't care much for me.

Sometimes I think maybe I should be looking out for my future and spending my time with men who might marry me. Do you think if I go with him for another year I might be able to break him down? — UNDECIDED

DEAR UN: Thank your lucky stars he was honest enough to tell you he's not marriage material. Look for a man who is.

Mom's House Habits A Sign of Illness

DEAR ABBY: How does a married woman tell her parents that something is none of their business?

When my husband and I visit them, they ask a lot of questions that we don't care to answer. Most of these concern the private lives of our friends. To make matters worse, my parents repeat everything they hear. And my mother exaggerates until she stretches the truth.

I can't come out and say, "It's none of your business." There must be a nicer way of getting this across. I hate to lie and say I don't know.

DIXIE

DEAR DIXIE: You could say, "Talking about people and their personal affairs is dull and boring. Can't we talk about something else?" Then change the subject.

Vocal Chord Paralysis

I awoke one day and was so hoarse I could barely speak. I hadn't been over-using my voice particularly, though I do teach small children. The doctor found that I have a paralysis of one of my vocal cords. He couldn't explain why. I'm still hoarse after eight months.—Miss P.N., Calif.

DEAR MISS N.:

The two vocal cords that lie in the voice box, or larynx, are strands of muscle tissue about one inch long. These come together when one is speaking. They separate when one breathes. It is almost impossible to speak and breathe at the same time. Two different sets of nerves perform these two functions.

There are two types of paralysis of the vocal cords. One is the inability of the cords to come together and make sounds. The other is the inability to separate.

Since there are so many causes of paralysis of the vocal cords, each must be eliminated step-by-step in order to track down the offending one.

In some instances, problems in the esophagus and even an enlarged auricle of the heart may press on the nerve that controls the vocal cords.

Hoarseness is caused by any one of the types of paralysis of the vocal cords. Hoarseness is the body's cry, pleading that the reason be thoroughly investigated. Hoarseness that lasts for more than two weeks should be studied to find and remove the cause.

Have you been back to your doctor during these eight months? X-ray studies of the larynx and direct examination of the larynx with an instrument known as the laryngoscope, and a variety of other tests, may shed new light on the cause of your problem.

Cars 'Lethal Weapon' For Teen-Agers

CHICAGO (AP) — "There is no doubt that we hand teenagers a lethal weapon when we hand them a car," says Dr. Derek Miller, a psychiatrist at Northwestern University's medical school.

Miller, who took park in a symposium on "Youths and Driving" — the Road to Death" — says 16 is too young for driving and 18 is too young for drinking, particularly for males, and that the two combine to turn many an outing in a car a teenage tragedy.

A car is "a symbol of power" that children learn about from fathers who speed and from television shows in which "automobiles are constantly portrayed racing along the freeway" and nobody ever gets hurt, he said.

The message, he said, is that "you can get away with this sort of behavior."

Youngsters have difficulty understanding that they will one day die, he said. "They know it intellectually but they do not believe it."

He said there are more drivers under age 20 involved in accidents than any other age group.

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

Normally, in duplicate bridge, safety plays in a suit are not made, for a safety play in a suit frequently involves the giving away of a trick in order to assure one's contract. In duplicate bridge, with scoring being on a relative basis, one usually cannot afford to give away a potential overtrick, for the overtrick may be worth its weight in gold.

However, on occasion the employment of a safety play can bring home a contract that the "unknowing" would have lost. Here is a case in point, taken from a duplicate game.

NORTH
♠ K52
♡ J85
◇ AQ84
♣ J106

WEST	EAST
♠ 763	♠ AJ1098
♡ 42	♡ AQ1073
◇ J1032	◇ -
♣ K875	♣ Q94

SOUTH
♠ Q4
♡ K96
◇ K9765
♣ A32

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
Pass	1 ♠	Pass	Pass
Dbl.	2 ♡	2NT	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Seven of ♠.

North's reopening takeout double was perhaps on the light side, but since he had passed originally, denying 13 points, he knew that South would not misconstrue North's bid.

East played the eight of spades on the opening lead, and South won the trick with the queen. He perceived that five diamond tricks would be there for the taking if the four outstanding cards in this suit were divided either 2-2 or 3-1. But also considered the outside possibility that one of the defenders might possess the four missing diamonds.

If East held them, a diamond trick would have to be lost, since East's (hypothetical) ten-spot would force South's king and promote East's jack into an eventual winner. But if West held the four diamonds, then the loss of a diamond trick could be avoided.

At trick two, declarer dashed the diamond king, East discarding a heart. Then came a low diamond, West's ten being taken by dummy's queen. A heart was then led, South's king winning when East played low. Another diamond lead now entrapped West's J-3. Declarer now had himself five diamond tricks, one spade, one heart, and one club.

In conclusion, had a diamond been led to dummy's ace at trick two, West would have had himself a diamond trick by not putting up the ten or jack.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): What had been an "open secret" is not likely to be "quiet" any longer. There is going to be review, revision, a tearing down in preparation for rebuilding process. Aquarius, Leo and Taurus figure prominently. Keep diet resolutions — and medical-dental appointments!

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Affairs of heart dominate. Love nature is emphasized. Speculative ventures are featured. Impulse attempts to rule logic. Gemini, Sagittarius figure prominently. Lover's quarrel could be on agenda. You may be asked to give up something for nothing. Refuse to be stupid!

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You get proverbial "break." One who pulls strings wants to make room for you at more elevated position. Be receptive, diplomatic and don't sell yourself short. You have something of value — know it and others will, too.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Travel prognostications are subject to error. Know it and ask questions. Relative, very self-assured, could be sincere but whistling in dark. Steer clear of self-deception. Listen to inner voice, not bellow of wishful thinking.

IF NOVEMBER 6th IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you have unusual voice; you are compassionate and passionate. You soon will shake off feelings of restriction. You make important domestic changes this month. If single, you marry next year. If married, you travel and there could be an addition to family. Taurus, Libra and Scorpio persons play important roles in your life Be wary of throat trouble. Dont neglect health signals in that area. When you are fatigued, you "feel" it in your neck and others hear it in your voice. You are going to be more productive, creative, have more love in your life — and you are going to be happier!

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J. A. H. HUNTER

Len's party was over, the guests all gone, and now there remained only the chore of clearing up. "You can wash the glasses," Eve told the boy. "As it's your birthday I'll pay you 11 cents each."

"That's great, Mom," the boy replied. "Even for any I break?"

Eve smiled. "Sure, but you'll pay too. A penny the first, two cents the second, four cents the third, and so on. Double up each time. And now you're older maybe you won't break any."

The job didn't take long, but it wasn't so very profitable! In fact Len cleared only $3.33. How many glasses did he break?

DUNCAN BOATLAND

TURKEY LOVERS

"Boatlands" first annual pre-Christmas TURKEY sale!

Does the memory of your Thanksgiving TURKEY still linger fondly on the taste buds of your mind. Do you wish you didn't have to wait until Christmas to experience that feeling again.

Then Boatland can help you now!

Each of our stores in Victoria, Duncan, Courtenay, and Campbell River, has a number of boating trade-ins which are kiddingly referred to in the boating business as TURKEYS. Old boats and wooden boats, boat motor and trailer packages where the engine needs an overhaul or the boat needs fibreglass work.

We want them gone now, and we're practically giving ithem away. No reasonable offers refused. Some of our utility grade TURKEYS will go for as little as 50c per pound.

So if you are interested in a TURKEY and don't mind a little do-it-yourself fix-up work over the winter, come in and see us at your local Boatland store before the Christmas rush.

Highways Work Program To Provide 1,500 Jobs

By LIZ HUGHES
Times Staff

The program, Fraser said, will provide 1,500 jobs this winter which would not otherwise exist. Those jobs will continue throughout the winter, weather permitting.

The job creation program was first announced by Premier Bill Bennett on Thanksgiving Day during his state of the province message.

"The government has authorized the department of highways to embark on a highway program of an additional $120 million, which will create jobs this winter," the premier said at the time.

But in a press conference the next morning, Bennett said he didn't know how many jobs would be created or exactly how much of the $120 million would actually be spent this year.

The department of highways, later the same day, released a report which showed that only $40 million of the $120 million would be spent this fiscal year which ends March 31, 1977.

The report did not reveal how many jobs were involved but at least seemed to indicate that about 2,000 jobs would be provided during the three years of the program.

Fraser said today that all of the $40 million might not be spent this year if weather conditions curtail some projects.

The minister said that 3,000 jobs were actually involved in the program, starting last summer, but that 1,500 people had already been laid off because of winter conditions.

The highways program also includes the construction of the 22-mile "missing link" of the north-Island highway.

He said the province's highways were in deplorable shape when the Social Credit government took over from the NDP last December. The emphasis on highways' programs, he said, actually started to drop during the last year of the W. A. C. Bennett government.

Fraser also revealed that construction costs for the provincial government's major downtown Vancouver complex have escalated again. An estimate earlier this year pegged the cost at about $135 million, but the minister said today the government will be lucky if the project is completed in 1979 at less than $160 million. The original cost estimate on the complex in 1968 was $25 million.

Part of the complex, the court facility, will cost about $400 per square foot, compared with the normal Vancouver area construction cost of $40 a square foot.

Man Charged With Rape, Abduction

A 30-year-old Greater Victoria area man was to appear in provincial court today charged with abduction and rape stemming from an incident in Central Saanich on Tuesday.

A police spokesman said the suspect was arrested at 10 a.m. Thursday in a beer parlor at 17-Mile House on Sooke Road.

Police said a 25-year-old woman was abducted on Pat Bay Highway Tuesday, sexually assaulted, and held captive in a camper for more than six hours before being released.

UNESCO Press Gag Refused

NAIROBI, Kenya (UPI) — European Common Market and Nordic countries today unanimously condemned a controversial resolution before the UN Education, Scientific and Cultural Organization that would restrict press freedoms.

Speaking on behalf of the nine-member European Economic Community, a Dutch spokesman said the Soviet-inspired draft on the mass media was "unacceptable" and against "our profoundest principles" on press freedom.

The proposal endorses the principle that governments should control the activities of the mass media.

The Dutch spokesman said EEC countries will not contribute "to discussion on the substance of the draft declaration," though they will participate in procedures to reach a compromise.

GRITS STUDY FADING IMAGE

OTTAWA (CP) — Liberal leaders met privately today to discuss a range of party concerns in the wake of continuing poor showings in public opinion polls.

Party officials said there was no fixed agenda for the meeting, and that the leaders have gathered for one in a series of talks. They first met as a group earlier this spring in Toronto.

Ontario Liberal Leader Stuart Smith said he planned to use the meeting for a "private discussion on the state of liberalism in Canada."

But Dave Steuart of Saskatchewan, who will be replaced as leader at a provincial convention Dec. 11, joked that the gathering was just a chance "for the Pope to call the bishops together."

Prime Minister Trudeau planned to spend the bulk of his day at the meeting, although aides said he would slip away occasionally for other appointments.

Quebec was not represented. Premier Robert Bourassa and his ministers are tied up with a Nov. 15 re-election effort. Fernand Lalonde, the province's deputy premier was to attend, but cancelled his plans at the last minute.

Liberals are in power in only three of the country's 10 provinces—Prince Edward Island, Nova Scotia and Quebec.

NOVA SCOTIA VIEWED AS RIP-OFF, SURLY

HALIFAX (CP) — Tourists are complaining about high costs and commercialism in parts of Nova Scotia, a U.S. tour operator said today.

"Comment cards describing the province as a 'rip-off, too expensive and surly' are not uncommon," Arthur Tauck, president of Tauck Tours of New York, told a tourism seminar.

His company has been operating tours in Nova Scotia since 1927.

Tauck said the province may be losing its image of warmth and friendliness which has been its strongest selling point.

He said his company has experienced "more inflation in Nova Scotia than in any other part of North America" where it operates.

The company's 14-day Maritime visit — which includes eight days in Nova Scotia — will increase to $849 next year from $750.

Tauck said this compares with $839 for a 15-day tour of the Western United States.

Two of the dead were foreigners. Their nationalities and identities were not given.

The official said there were 10 survivors, including a former Indonesian communications minister, Vice-Marshal Iskander. All were seriously injured.

Exemptions On Taxes Up

OTTAWA (CP) — Personal income tax exemptions for the 1977 tax year will rise by 8.6 per cent as the result of indexing to match increases in the cost of living, the finance department announced today.

For 1977, the basic personal exemption will rise to $2,270 from its 1976 level of $2,090 and the married exemption will go to $1,990 from $1,830 the department said in a news release.

Deductions for the aged and disabled will go to $1,420 from $1,310. Maximum exemptions for chidren under 16 will rise to $430 from $390 and four children 16 and over will go to $780 from $720.

The indexing plan was approved by Parliament in 1973 and allows increased exemptions and tax bracket limits to reflect changes in the government's consumer price index, the most frequently used measure of inflation.

The department said the changes will reduce federal revenues in 1977 by $950 million.

The 8.6-per-cent figure is based on increases in the average consumer price index for the 12-month period ending in September, 1976, above corresponding averages for the 12-month period ending in September, 1975.

The adjustment reflects inflation in the period before anti-inflation controls were introduced in October, 1975, the department said.

In the last several months, the 12-month inflation rate has been averaging about seven per cent, and September's consumer price index was 6.5 per cent above figures for September, 1975.

THIEU BUYS HOME IN U.K.

LONDON (TNS) — Nguyen Van Thieu, exiled former president of South Vietnam, has purchased a $65,000 home in New Malden, a fashionable suburb south of London, it was reported Friday.

Thieu has been living in Britain since last year after he went into exile in April, 1975, just before South Vietnam surrendered to the Communists. He has a 13-year-old son at Eton.

LEVESQUE VOW

Quebec Pullout If PQ Wins

MONTREAL (CP) — If a Parti Quebecois government is elected Nov. 15, it would move within two years to take Quebec out of Confederation, party leader Rene Levesque said in an interview Thursday.

The first step would be to ask Ottawa to hand over the powers that would make Quebec a sovereign state. The request would be followed by a referendum.

Levesque, 54, who quit the Liberal party a decade ago to fight for independence, has played down the issue in the current campaign. Instead he has attacked the record of Premier Robert Bourassa's government and promised a more efficient administration. But, he says, the Parti Quebecois remains an independence party.

If elected, it would consider that voters had given it a mandate to begin negotiations with Ottawa to separate from Canada.

He added that the party had also made a commitment not to push Quebecers into independence against their will.

The party would function as a normal provincial government while drafting a law that would set the rules of a referendum, which would have a single clearly-understandable question.

Victory in a referendum would require Canada, under the terms of the Helsinki declaration, to negotiate the province's departure from Confederation. The Helsinki declaration states that all peoples have the right to determine their internal and external political status.

If Ottawa agreed to negotiate, Quebecers might have to be polled several times through referendums on various issues. The process would take several years because billions in assets and liabilities would be involved.

The rights of the English-speaking minority would be entrenched by a separate Quebec, Levesque said. They would be guaranteed rights to tax-supported schools and would be treated "like everyone else."

All new immigrants, "whether they are from Sydney, N.S., or Sydney, Australia" would have to attend French-language schools while awaiting citizen status.

Levesque said independence is inevitable because it is rooted "in people's consciousness."

"When Trudeau says 'separatism is dead' he is wrong. It is a permanent feeling because it is tied to economic facts and a growing discontent with political institutions."

A United States economist said Thursday in Sherbrooke, 90 miles east of Montreal, that Quebec's economy would not be seriously harmed if the province became independent.

Dr. Ronald Muller, an economics professor from the American University, Washington D.C., said: "I do not believe that Quebec would suffer serious economic reprisals if it secedes because its vast natural wealth would attract any foreign investor."

He was speaking at the International Council on Regional Economics here, in its fourth day.

He likened the Quebec economy and its problems to those of Peru. Both regions have a wealth of natural resources, both are geographically well spread out and both are heavily dependent on multinational companies for the exploitation

BNA VETO FEARED

Giving any province a veto on future constitutional change won't unite — and it could break up — Canada, former defence minister James Richardson said in Victoria today.

"The Canada I believe in has a limitless destiny and in my Canada there is an open-hearted and welcome place for Quebec as a great province of Canada," he told members of the Men's Canadian Club in a lunchtime speech.

But what Canada will be allowed to become in future depends on two critical questions: what's in a patriated constitution and what the rules are for changing the constitution, he said.

Richardson, Liberal MP for Winnipeg South, resigned from the Trudeau cabinet last month because he is opposed to the amending formula Ottawa will argue for at a meeting of first ministers next month.

His speech in Victoria today is the first on a national tour which will see him speaking in all 10 provinces over the next month.

At the constitutional conference in Victoria five years ago the federal government first proposed a constitutional amending formula which would give the veto to:

—at least two of the Atlantic provinces.

—at least two of the western provinces which had a current combined population of at least half that of all western provinces.

That's still the formula favored by Ottawa and one he opposes for the most fundamental reason, Richardson said.

The formula gives a veto to both Quebec and Ontario in perpetuity.

"It is important for Canadians to realize that a veto can prevent something from being taken out of the constitution, but in future years a veto can also prevent something being added to the constitution.

"We must ask if it is really our intention to establish an amending formula under which nine provinces of Canada and a vast majority of Canadians might wish to add to Canada's constitution but

Rodriguez Guilty Of Murder

NANAIMO (CP) — A British Columbia Supreme Court jury found James Rodriguez Melendez, 25, guilty Thursday of murder in the death of Pamela Jones, 22, and guilty of manslaughter in the death of James Oldfield, 29. Both were fatally shot Oct. 24, 1975.

The jury of eight men and four women deliberated 7½ hours before reaching a verdict and recommending early parole.

Mr. Justice John Aiken sentend Rodreiguez to life imprisonment on the murder conviction and eight years concurrent for manslaughter. The jury recommended that Rodriguez be eligible for parole in 10 years.

The sentencing concluded the 23-day trial in which 36 witnesses were heard and about 150 exhibits were entered.

Jones, Oldfield and Rodriguez shared a house three miles from Duncan at the time of the murders.

From early November of 1975, Rodriguez was sought by police in connection with the disappearance of Jones and Oldfield. Their badly-decomposed bodies were found Nov. 7 near a garbage dump. About the same time, Oldfield's abandoned pick-up truck and dismantled parts of two rifles were found.

Ethics Rules Pledged

Times News Sevices

OTTAWA — The government is planning to introduce as soon as possible legislation setting out conflict-of-interest rules for MPs and senators, acting prime minister Allan MacEachen said Thursday.

MacEachen told the Commons that while it was a "matter of urgency" he could not guarantee to present the bill before Christmas as demanded by some members of the opposition.

He told New Democratic Party leader Ed Broadbent the legislation would likely be called the "independence of Parliament Act."

MacEachen, who is also the Liberal House leader, said the government was not studying reports on conflict-of-interest from both the House and the Senate.

The 15-month-old reports are based on the government's green paper on conflict of interest presented in 1973 by MacEachen.

The conflict-of-interest issue has raged through the Commons all week, following disclosures that Conservative MP Peter Bawden (Calgary South) has cashed in on business deals with the Liberal government since his election in 1972. Recently, he sold a $120,000 aircraft to the RCMP through a company he owns, Enden Ltd.

Callaghan Won't Quit Despite Blow at Polls

LONDON (Reuter) — British Prime Minister James Callaghan declared today that his Labor government will carry on despite a hammering in three parliamentary by-elections.

The voters swung decisively toward the Conservatives, defeating Labor in two of the three seats, all in working class areas regarded as solid Labor strongholds. Labor's effective parliamentary majority was cut to one from two.

But Callaghan said in a statement that the results would "in no way affect the government's determination to pursue the task of national recovery."

"Britain needs a sustained effort and the government will not be deterred by the temporary setback. . . . We intend to carry on with our economic and legislative program."

He said rebuilding Britain's industrial system would be difficult but with Labort's cooperation with the trade unions the country had its greatest chance in a generation to break out of decades of decline.

In Walsall, the Conservatives turned a more than 16,000 vote deficit in the 1974 general election into a 4,379 majority — a swing of 22.5 per cent.

They swung 13 per cent to capture the seat at Workington, but failed to draw the needed 27 per cent to take the seat at Newcastle.

FLYING OTTO COST $740,000

OTTAWA (CP) — Transport Minister Otto Lang, a forceful advocate of the user-pay concept to eliminate travel subsidies, has spent more than $740,000 worth of tax money on government flights since 1973.

Many of the flights on transport department airplanes were to his home riding of Saskatoon-Humboldt in Saskatchewan.

In a written Commons reply to Conservative Tom Cossitt (Leeds), Lang's parliamentary secretary Marcel Roy said Thursday that all the minister's flights "were for official government business."

That reply, Cossitt said in a statement, is ridiculous. The flights to Saskatoon obviously were not on government business.

Although Lang first started using government airplanes when he joined the cabinet in 1968, Roy said there are no records of Lang flights up to April, 1973.

Since then, the minister has taken 133 flights for a total cost of $742,829.

Information tabled by Roy shows that Lang usually takes a government Jetstar — a small four-engine jet with eight plush seats and a steward — when he travels.

Taking the government plane from Ottawa to Saskatoon costs about $7,000, round trip. Regular Air Canada economy fare to Saskatoon is $274, round trip. First class is $412, plus an $8 airport tax.

JOBLESS UP

WASHINGTON (AP) — The unemployment rate in the United States rose to 7.9 per cent in October from 7.8 per cent the previous month, the government said today. The figures provided fresh evidence that the U.S. economic slowdown is continuing.

Auto Crashes Up: MVB

Motor vehicle branch statistics show a four per cent increase in auto accidents in B.C. for the first five months of this year, contrary to statements made over the past few months by Premier Bill Bennett and Pat McGeer.

The statistics, released Thursday, cover a period from Jan. 1 to May 31, and show there were 32,338 accidents in B.C., an increase of 2,647 over the same period in 1975. The total number of vehicles involved in accidents was 54,762, an increase of five per cent from 1975.

Both McGeer, minister responsible for the Insurance Corporation of B.C., and the premier have said several times that accidents are down this year, and indicated the ICBC rate increases last winter are responsible for the decrease because motorists are more cautious.

A spokesman in McGeer's office says the two versions of the figures are not imcompatible.

The branch statistics are probably correct, the spokesman said, but the minister has been basing his statements on statistics obtained from police in sample areas of the province. The minister's figures are more recent, the spokesman said, and cover the period through the end of September.

The figures continue to show a decreasing number of accidents, he said.

The MVB statistics show the number of fatalities has decreased by five per cent — 214 deaths compared with 226 a year ago. The number of accidents causing deaths is down 7 per cent, to 177 from 192.

The number of accidents involving only property damage is up nine per cent in the first five months of the year and the total property damage is 12 per cent more in that period than in 1975.

The minister's sample figures are taken from Terrace, Nanaimo, Surrey, Burnaby, Victoria, Prince George, Kelowna and Kamloops.

Times News Services

GENEVA — The Rhodesia conference bogged down today in a total black-white impasse over setting a firm date for majority rule and conference sources said Prime Minister Ian Smith is expected to return to the talks shortly.

The rival black and white delegations met today in full session but failed to set a date for independence under majority rule and the conference adjourned without another meeting being arranged.

Ivor Richard, the British chairman, proposed March 1, 1978, as the date but this was rejected by both sides — the black nationalists saying it was too far away and the white government insisting it would be too soon.

Conference officials said Smith, who quit the conference Wednesday complaining he had done nothing but "twiddle my thumbs," may return within one week.

Richard scheduled a weekend of private bilateral consultations with the various delegation leaders after he failed today to get everyone to agree on an independence date.

Smith made it clear in a Salisbury news conference today the system he envisages under a majority rule constitution excludes suffrage on a one-man, one-vote basis.

"I go along with African majority rule according to my definition because I'm an African the same as the majority of whites who live in this part of the world. I am not prepared to give consideration to future constitutions for Rhodesia on a basis of color.

"Once we get to a stage where we are determining people's right to govern purely on the color of their skin as opposed to their efficiency, then I believe that will be a sad day for Rhodesia and I will continue to resist that."

Ramphal said that almost half of Rhodesia's 270,000 whites went there since the unilateral declaration of independence 11 years ago.

PAYOFF PUZZLE

Correct Answers to Last Week's Puzzle

CLUES ACROSS:

4. STRIP not strap or strop. The kind of sharpener in question is simply a strop, which is "a STRIP of some suitable material." Similarly, a strap, if suitable, would be "a STRIP of some suitable material."
7. CAUTION not caption. As the clue implies, a CAUTION conveys an idea in terms of "sense." Often, however, a caption is primarily an identification by name.
9. WOMAN not women. Presumably, only one WOMAN would try to order him about at any one time.
10. PEARL not pears. Since it is for looking at, a PEARL is more firmly apt. Pears, though misshapen, can be just as good to eat, at least.
17. FOE not fee. One may doubt that a big fee is "formidable" in an absolute sense, or that a man will undertake to pay a fee that exceeds his resources, so involving a question of "help." FOE is more convincing as an answer.
20. JAR not car. A car hardly needs to be of "open" type to be accessible to flies, etc. — which could easily get into an open JAR as opposed to a sealed one.
22. RAP not tap. The volume of sound is the difference between a RAP and a tap. The RAP is abrupt and loud. It would probably wake the sleeper. The tap might be slight and go unheard.
25. LIVELY not likely. "LIVELY" is the more natural word in the context given, which calls for something like "usual," or "appropriate" rather than "likely."
26. CAT not hat. Derogatory remarks about her CAT are quite apt to be "taken personally," i.e., they are not directly personal as rudeness about her hat (or her fatness) would be.
27. DOLT not colt. Certainly, a DOLT does not choose to be slow of wit. Colt is less apt, since a "slow" horse may be one that dislikes racing, is considered lazy, etc.

CLUES DOWN:

1. MAKE not take. In ordinary terms, earnings are MADE rather than taken.
2. STARS not start. It's the play, rather than its "start" so regarded, that may seem to creak a bit at first. One may get the impression of the STARS being slow to warm to their roles. (After "a while," the play is past its start, anyway!)
3. ROW not bow. On the face of it, the clue suggests an ordinary question of a long one as opposed to a short one, as in the case of a ROW by oarsmen. On the other hand, "longbow" and "crossbow" are special usages, it's not really a question of a bow being "a long one."
6. PREMISES not promises. Aptly, it is reasonable to assume that you want, and take steps, to vacate unsuitable PREMISES (that it may prove not all that easy). On the other hand, you may well regard even foolishly made promises as being totally binding.
13. BATH not oath. The clue favors something taken quite ordinarily, which "some people" might invest with a certain ritualistic aspect.
17. FLARES not flakes. FLARES (such as in fireworks or emergency FLARES) is the more natural and convincing answer. It's a question of snow falling, rather than of "flakes drifting down"; also, the clue suggests some event which, though easily imaginable in the mind's eye, is more abnormal than snow.

Collectibles

By JOHN HEARN

To Carol Fenton of Duncan, B.C., and many others who "once owned dozens of Big Little Books and threw them all away and now they are worth a fortune."

They are not really worth a fortune. There are some which list in the $25-$50 bracket but mostly they will trade for under $10. The price guides are not very useful in that they refer only to "mint" condition and personally I have never seen or heard of a Big Little Book in anything like mint condition. They were printed on the lowest grade pulp and would need to have been kept in Saran Wrap since long before it was invented to have survived in even reasonable condition. Collectors are usually satisfied if they are intact, un-scribbled in and not too yellow.

This is a terrifying question because Heaven forbid that I should be responsible for ruining some priceless chalice. However, provided the discoloration is only tarnish, place the piece in an aluminum pan, cover it with luke-warm water and add a little baking soda — about one teaspoon to the quart. Two minutes should be plenty. Remove, rinse with cold water and dry with a soft cloth. Silver tarnish can be removed the same way.

P. T. Higson of Vancouver has an old pocket watch, the case of which is marked Silverine. Is this some form of silver, he asks, or if not, what is it?

It is an alloy frequently used for watches of middle range quality. It consists of 45 per cent nickel, 54 per cent copper and 1 per cent manganese. It is also known as Silveroid, Silverode, Silverore, Oresilver and Alaska Silver.

Geo. Fox of North Van sends me a sketch of a Planters Peanut jar — square with 7-inch sides, a peanut knob on the lid and the word Planters embossed on all four sides.

Almost any old Planters container or package is worth something. The jar you describe could easily fetch $50 or $60 provided it is not a reproduction — something which you must beware of since, I gather, they are currently being imported from Italy.

Mrs. Mayhew of Victoria enquires how valuable is old sheet music. This is beginning to be a big item in the States but Canadian collectors are few and far between. Here are some U.S. prices taken at random. Alexander's Ragtime Band $4.00. April Showers, $5.00. 12th St. Rag, $7.00. On Moonlight Bay, $2.00. I suggest you put them back in the piano bench and wait another five years.

John Hearn will be pleased to hear your comments on collectibles. Mail can be sent to Prevue, c-o Box 4090, Station A, Toronto M5W 1M9.

Show Explores Guthrie's U.S.

The vision of one of America's greatest folk poets and balladeers, Woody Guthrie, will be presented in his own words and music on Soundstage, Saturday, Nov. 6 at 10 p.m. on Public TV 9.

"Woody Guthrie's America" represents a different concept for SOUNDSTAGE, combining the immediacy and energy of a concert performance with first hand visual and aural documentary accounts.

Gathering to sing both famous and little-known Guthrie material are Judy Collins, Pete Seeger, Arlo Guthrie, and Fred Hellerman, an original member of the Weavers.

Thematically, the program traces Woody's odyssey through this land from his birthplace in Okemah, Oklahoma, to the dust bowl, California, and the Pacific Northwest. As the tour progresses, Woody's impressions of the labor union movement, of his days in the Merchant Marine, and of children are recounted. A poignant reminiscence delivered by Terkel and Collins tells of a tragedy in his youth that haunted him for the rest of his life.

Sorcerer On CBS

"Flying Sorcerer," a film from England that recounts the adventures of a young boy and his uncle as they travel to a different century via a time machine, will be broadcast Saturday, Nov. 6 at 1 p.m. on "The CBS Children's Film Festival" on the CBS Television Network, Channel 12.

The script by Leo Maguire and Harry Booth is based on an original story by Hazel Swift. It begins in the 20th-century laboratory of Uncle Charlie, whose secret and imperfected invention, a time machine, is accidentally activated and transports nephew David back into the middle ages.

Outside a medieval castle, David meets its Lady Eleanor, whose father is off on the Crusades, and her slightly bumbling sorcerer, named Astrolabe, who are being terrorized by Dormantis, the local fire-breathing dragon. David and his new "old" friends tumble between the two centuries, pursued by Dormantis, before their lives are straightened out.

The film was produced by Hugh Stewart and directed by Harry Booth. Kim Birfield portrays David, Debbie Russ plays Lady Eleanor, John Bluthal is Uncle Charlie, and Tim Barrett is Astrolabem.

Studio Sold To Warner

LOS ANGELES (AP) — In a move that will bolster its position in the television industry, Warner Bros. has made an agreement to purchase the Wolper Organization.

Headed by producer David Wolper, the company has been a maker of television and theatrical documentaries, as well as situation comedies "Chico and the Man" and "Welcome Back, Kotter." Wolper also produced the forthcoming 12-hour TV movie, "Roots," based on Alex Haley's book.

Wolper said he planned to remain active in TV and films, cutting down the administrative duties he has been involved with during his 27 years in television. He sold his first production company to Metromedia in 1966.

Jus-Rite PHOTO TIPS

Priceless flash pictures are lost every day because flash equipment is not in good working order. With the heaviest flash season coming, now is the time to recheck your equipment. Have the flash batteries tested; you may need new ones. Buy only those marked "Photo", "Photoflash", or "Alkaline"; ordinary flashlight batteries are too weak. Have them tested before buying. Have the flash contacts checked for corrosion and dirt, and the wires checked for any breaks. Before loading a new film in an Instamatic, remove the flash batteries, put a flashcube into the socket, trip the shutter several times. This cleans the shutter contacts and the rotating cube cleans the socket contacts.

CANADA'S RADIO CELEBRATES 40TH BIRTHDAY

CBC Radio celebrates its 40th birthday this month by launching what promises to be the most exciting major series it's ever undertaken — Special Occasion. This is the first time CBC Radio has combined the efforts of five of its departments in one series, to present two hours weekly of high-quality drama, music, variety, news and current affairs specials exploiting the full resources of radio with imaginative production techniques.

The series, which started on CBC-FM last week, will be repeated on AM Sundays, beginning Nov. 7, at 5:05 p.m. Alan Maitland, a well-known CBC announcer-host for almost three decades, will be regular host.

Special Occasion gets underway with a birthday documentary, The First Forty, about how the CBC began and developed, about its successes and growing pains, with curtain calls for some of the stars and programmers who made it all happen, and excerpts from the kinds of shows CBC Radio has presented through the last four decades.

The script is by Harry J. Boyle, chairman of the CRTC, well-known author, and a former CBC producer whose innovative production techniques set the style for some of today's most popular shows. The program has been compiled with humor and honesty by a group includign producer Doug MacDonald, Richard Coulter, Pat Patterson, Angus McLellan, Art Crighton, and Len Scher. Later Special Occasions include a Wagner opera, a profile of songwriter Cole Porter, a new play by George Ryga, a musical version of The Snow Queen, and many other shows.

Symphony Goes Modern

Seiji Ozawa conducts an evening of modern music on Evening at Symphony, Sunday, Nov. 7 at 8:00 p.m. on Public TV 9.

The concert starts with Charles Ives, Fourth Symphony, a sprawling work which Ives said seeks to describe the "searching questions of 'What?' and 'Why?,' which the spirit of man asks of life." Premiered in 1965 by Leopold Stokowski, who found it expedient to use three conductors, it since has been manipulated into a more manageable one-conductor operation.

Gone With the Wind

Epic Movie on Television

By JERRY BUCK

LOS ANGELES (AP) — What can you say about a 37-year-old movie that refuses to die?

That it's the greatest epic film ever made. That it's one of the most acclaimed pictures of all time. That more than 150 million people worldwide have seen it — many again and again.

That NBC paid an estimated $10 million — the highest price ever for a movie — to televise it Sunday and Monday nights.

The movie is, of course, "Gone with the Wind," adapted from Margaret Mitchell's sweeping novel of the Civil War. It will be aired Sunday, Nov. 7, on Channel 8 at 8 p.m. With the conclusion on Monday, Nov. 8, at 9 p.m.

Outside of a showing on the Home Box Office cable service this summer, "Gone with the Wind" has never been seen on television. It is the last major motion picture made before 1970 to make it to the small screen.

"Gone with the Wind" has already been seen in theatres by more people than any other movie — and NBC believes it will draw the biggest audience ever for a movie on television. It estimates 110 million people will tune in. The most widely viewed movie to date on TV was "Ben-Hur," which attracted 86 million people in 1971 on CBS.

If NBC's audience estimate is correct, it will be well worth the $10 million it paid. It would knock NBC through the roof in the ratings for two weeks — since the Sunday part would be in one ratings week and the Monday part would start the next week.

The first part, running three hours, will be shown Sunday night and the second part, running two hours, will be on Monday.

Clark Gable

Tribute to Herman

Woody, a tribute to band leader Woody Herman, airs on Public TV 9 Sunday, Nov. 7 at 3:30 p.m. Highlighting this ninety minute special is a collection of tunes performed by Woody and his "Young Thundering Herd" at a 40-year anniversary concert at Adventureland in Des Moines, Iowa.

The salute also features film clips of Woody and his bands, as well as interviews with Oscar-winner Ralph Burns, arranger Nat Pierce, Dave Garroway, and various members of his past and present "Herds."

NFB TV Film Best In World Show

The National Film Board production, Los Canadienses, directed by Albert Kish, has been named the best television film at the prestigious Mannheim International Film Festival in Germany.

As well, the International Federation of Cinema Critics awarded the film an honourable mention.

Los Canadienses recalls the exploits of the Mackenzie-Papineau battalion and its role in the Spanish Civil War. The film tells of this group of Canadians who chose to fight with the government in the 1936-39 war and of their reasons for leaving Canada and joining this distant cause.

Auction Week On PBS

The first Public TV 9 auction will be held Nov. 8-14, with thousands of dollars-worth of merchandise and services offered to Channel 9 viewers for public bidding.

The action will be staged on television from 6 p.m. to 1 a.m. weekdays, and from 1 p.m. to 1 a.m. on the weekend.

Viewers in British Columbia, always strong supporters of public broadcasting, will be able to bid on items donated by merchants and individuals from throughout Washington State and Canada. Included on the auction block are a weekend for four at the Hotel Vancouver — two nights and three days in a luxury two-bedroom suite — with a full course dinner for four at the well known Timber Club. Also up for bids are two seats in the Queen Elizabeth Theatre for such concert attractions as Van Cliburn, Katherine Hepburn and Vladimir Ashkenazy. Included in this fine package are accommodations at the Four Seasons Hotel. How about a fun "getaway" at the famous Harrison Hot Springs, or any number of sport packages for every enthusiast. Other items include a 1977 Pinto, a $2,300 stereo system, a multi-color mink walking jacket, and much, much more.

Why an auction? Channel 9 is a non-commercial public TV station, providing Washington and British Columbia residents with such outstanding programs as Upstairs, Downstairs, Sesame Street.

Television Mailbag

By RICK ROBERTS

HOLLYWOOD — The TV Mailbag:

Q. I know you answered this some time ago, but can you repeat how television ratings are determined? — S. M., Haddonfield, N.J.

A. With the new television season nearing, it may be a good time to warn viewers how ratings are established.

Television sets are hooked up to the system and through a special device, the company is able to determine which are the most popular shows.

There have been more and more complaints about the way ratings are determined, particularly with reports coming out that some Nielsen families leave the set on when they are away from home to give a program a higher rating.

Q. My husband and I are having a disagreement about John Denver. He says he uses a stage name. Is he right? — B. H., Sicklerville, N.J.

A. Your husband is right. Denver's real name is John Deutchendorf.

Q. Please tell who plays the character Larry on "One Life to Live." Also, anything you can tell about his background will be appreciated. — L. N., Elkhart, Ind.

A. Larry is played by Michael Storm, who began his career as a singer on the Andy Williams show.

He holds a bachelor of arts degree in fine arts painting and was torn between becoming an artist, a writer or pursuing his singing career.

He still pursues these interests, he said, although he plans to keep acting.

Q. A friend and I recently had a discussion over Frank Sinatra. I said I had read somewhere that his real name is O'Brien. My friend disagrees with this 100 per cent. Who's right? — A. C., Somerdale, N.J.

A. Your friend, Sinatra's full name is Francis Albert Sinatra.

Questions of general interest will be answered in the column. Volume of mail prohibits personal replies. Inquiries should be sent to Rick Roberts, TV Mailbag, in care of Prevue, Box 300, Victoria, B.C. V8W 2N4.

CTV Presents Wilde Story

On Nov. 8, CTV Television Network will present Oscar Wilde's The Remarkable Rocket, a half-hour animated satire on egotism and self-puffery.

ON WEDNESDAY, Nov. 10, at 9 p.m. CBC-TV will present To Seek Perfection, a special half-hour tribute to the National Ballet of Canada on the occasion of their 25th anniversary. Celia Franca, who was the first artistic director of the company, is featured in the film, along with many international ballet stars.

Dramatic Hikes In Ratings Set

Public TV 9 has announced that the March Nielsen ratings reflected record high levels of viewing of public television nationwide. Dramatic increases were seen not only in "penetration" (households that viewed six minutes or more), but more significantly, in "household viewing hours" (which combines "penetration" and average viewing minutes per household).

With respect to the viewing of all programming on all public television stations during this March 1-28 period, the Nielsen ratings showed a "penetration" of 55.2%: these households averaged 499 minutes of public television viewing per month. Compared to October, 1975, "penetration" was up by 10.2%, while the gain in "household viewing hours" was 49.4%.

A similar increase was recorded for all prime time programming on all public TV stations. While "penetration" gained modestly (5.6%), the "household viewing hours" increased by 48%.

In surveying only programs distributed by PBS, the Nielsen statistics revealed a 9.8% increase in penetration, and an impressive 60.8% gain in "household viewing hours."

These statistical improvements were shared almost equally by "children's" and "non-children's" programming. "Household viewing hours" for children's programs alone were up by 58.9%. "Household viewing hours" for non-children's programs rose 62.4%.

During this same Nielsen rating time period, Public TV 9 showed an increase of 47,000 viewers, as compared to the year before. Although in market size, Public TV 9 ranks 18th in the nation, it ranks 13th of all public television stations in the number of households viewing per week.

Nielsen ratings do not take into account Public TV 9's Canadian or Eastern Washington audiences, since the survey is limited to the Seattle-Tacoma area. However, the statistics provided are helpful in showing that the station is a growing community station, striving to meet the needs and interests of the people of the Pacific Northwest.

Sounder Two Gentle Movie

By NORA E. TAYLOR

BOSTON, Mass. — In "Part 2, Sounder" Harold Sylvester plays the father, a role taken in the original "Sounder" by Paul Winfield.

The second "Sounder" is a spinoff using the characters from the Newbery Award-winning novel. The theme is the way in which a village gets together and ultimately builds a school of arts.

It is quiet film to which one might take the family without misgivings — except perhaps to wonder whether just too little happens. Are the youngsters in the film enough to hold the attention of the youngsters in the audience?

Sylvester, interviewed during a promotional visit here, feels that the appeal and strength of the picture lies in "its community sense." Nathan Lee Morgan (Sylvester) is urged by his oldest child, David Lee, to get a school built so that the lad can continue schooling. That's it.

There is little conflict for adults to emphathize with, and little excitement for children, but that "community sense" does indeed come through strongly. And that, Sylvester says, was what drew him to the screenplay in the first place.

It was his agent, he said, who nagged him into auditioning for the part of Nathan, and he was surprised when he got it.

It is his first major role. Before Hollywood — or rather Louisiana where the picture was made on location — Sylvester acted with the Free Southern Theatre, an ever-changing group whose performances are often as much political statements as drama. It was, however, surroundings in which, Sylvester noted, "you could learn to act if you wanted to."

"I think radical theater is important," he said. "I would do the whole thing again. I have a lot of strong feelings about community theater. I tell myself don't care about box office and all those other good things. But . . . I keep a bus ticket home in my pocket. There's always something else to do. I am fortunate to have had a good education. There are other things I enjoy and I refuse to lower my standards."

Those standards, he said, do not include the so-called "blaxploitation" films or "something that is embarassing. I have that bus ticket. Things have to be true."

He has worked as a TV cameraman and his behind-the-lens experience dictated a closer interest in the look of the film he was asked to act in than is usual among performers.

Even earlier, he says, he won a basketball scholarship to Tulane University, and "they had to have my time, but I chose to major in theater psychology. I think I have always been interested in people, the things that motivate people."

Ebony Wright and Harold Sylvester Build a School

He loved the stage, he said, from his earliest boyhood. It is, he added, "a way to explore what motivates (people) — and to project some of my own ideas. 'Sounder, Part 2,' is a film about community, what they can do when they make a concerted effort."

In thinking through his characterization of Nathan, Sylvester said, "I was consciously not using Paul Winfield as a model. I was afraid of the comparison initially. Maybe there is a real difference because I am from the South," he mused.

"My mother was a sharecropper, and my mother's mother. My experience was not very far from what they had (in 'Sounder')."

He was able to bring his own contribution to the role because director William Graham, was "always there," but allowed a lot of freedom to the actors.

His "couple of years" with the Free Southern Theater found him acting in "A Raisin in the Sun," "The Slave," John O'Neal's "When the Opportunity Scratches, Itch It," and other Afro themes. Because he "chose to learn," it was a good baptism in theatrical waters.

Since making his "Sounder," Sylvester has been tapped for roles in two other projects — one a television pilot about a private eye, and the other a segment of the TV series "Quincy" with Jack Klugman.

He also worked with Cicely Tyson in "The Autobiography of Miss Jane Pittman," and "The River Niger." "I have been lucky," he admitted.

TAKING PICTURES of actors at work is fun and easy because most actors are hams at heart anyway and love performing before a camera as well as before an audience. And don't worry about harsh lighting with lots of contrast — it just adds to the theatrical feel of your pictures.

A Play Is the Thing

By JERRY WINDLE

Many of us never have the chance to make pictures of a stage production with the exception of shooting from the audience during a performance. This is risky under most conditions since cameras are rather noisy, especially in quiet surroundings.

But if you want to have a little fun and try your hand at play photography, you might try approaching your local little theatre and ask to make some publicity pictures for their next production.

The best time to shoot these pictures will be during a dress rehearsal. This is when the actors appear on stage in costume and run through their lines for the final times. By this time they know the play well and have their actions down pat.

A wide-angle lens makes an excellent choice for play photography. The wide effect and distortion it produces when working close to the actors give your pictures an unreal feeling and actually enhance the "theatrical feel" of your pictures.

Your lighting can be just as spotty as you want. Harsh, contrasty lighting also adds that "theatrical" look to your pictures.

You have to be aware of the light and the amount you have to work with, because normally you are working on the borderline of drastically underexposing your pictures. Especially if the lighting is from spotlights which create hot spots only in certain parts of the stage.

Your job is to look at the light and determine where the light is hitting the stage and place your actors there is the most light for your pictures.

Once you have the light problem solved, you can concentrate on posing your actors. Remember that plays are designed to play with a full stage. So chances are that when you make your picture you will have to rearrange the actors for your picture. This will mean getting the actors quite close together.

Once you have determined the portion you want to photograph, let the actors run through their lines and actions so you can see what the action is. Then arrange your players for best picture effect.

There is a term in drama known as "cheating." This means that the actor will turn his face to the audience a little or "cheat" slightly to present his face at a better angle. It is important in play photography to see the faces of your ctors. They normally will be acting out parts which will involve different facial expressions and it is important to your pictures to have these.

When making your pictures, merely tell the actors to "cheat" right or left and they will know what you mean.

It is another good idea to keep your principal actors in a scene close to the camera. Any others in the scene can be left in the background as long as it does not become too crowded and detract from the basic action.

One problem you may face is that during the dress rehearsals, the sets may not be complete. This may present a problem since you will have to improvise. The best thing for you to use is a black background. This will make your subjects stand out even more and again present that theatrical look to your pictures.

Remember to have your actors overemphasize their actions and expressions. Chances are they will be doing this anyway, since they have been trained for the stage, but you may have to direct them a little here and there for only you can see what they are doing through the viewfinder.

Harsh lighting, strong contrast, black backgrounds and a little dash of the bizarre all make for interesting "play pictures," which effectively portray the action of the drama being performed.

HOLLYWOOD — Ask Jack Wiener, co-producer of "The Eagle Has Landed," a movie about a Nazi attempt to kidnap Churchill, why there's such a proliferation of World War II movies before cameras now, and he attributes the trend to "our fondess for cycles."

"I bought this book, 'The Eagle Has Landed,' more than two years ago," he pointed out on a recent afternoon as he watched his actor-soldiers attack an English village. "So we didn't just decide that it was time to make a movie about World War II.

"Still, we are in a cycle of interest about the war. I can't explain it except that somebody realizes a couple of good war pictures are being made — like this one and 'A Bridge Too Far' — so he decides, 'I guess I'd better make one too."

From a film maker's point of view, the American Civil War was a "commercial" conflict in that movies set in the period have made money in most cases.

The American Revolution and the Spanish American War have been box office bombs, generally speaking, but World War I was marketable, and World War II, especially when it starred John Wayne, was boffo at the box office.

Wiener couldn't explain why some wars sell better than others (filmwise, that is). He did venture, though, that few if any World War I movies will be made in the future, explaining:

"It's getting harder and harder to make good films about things that go back too far.

"If I were to find a good story about World War I, it would be almost impossible to find the proper material for a movie. I wouldn't be able to give it the proper look.

"Today it's almost impossible to find real Jeeps from World War II, and if you have to build those things, production costs become prohibitive.

"We had a terrible time finding a motor torpedo boat from World War II, because only two of the kind we needed are in existence.

"If we'd had to build one, it would have cost $185,000.

"So it's going to be more and more difficult to make pictures about past wars unless one has a tremendous budget.

Susan Seaforth and Bill Hayes, stars of "Days of Our Lives," had to get married a second time to get their first honeymoon.

The couple who, in the roles of Julie Banning Anderson and Doug Williams, were married Oct. 1 on Columbia Pictures Television's long-running daytime serial have been married in real life since Oct. 12, 1974.

But, prior to their televison nuptials, they'd never had time for a honeymoon.

Now, though, since scriptwriters sent Julie and Doug to Italy on a wedding trip, Susan and Bill actually "honeymooned" there with visits to Venice, Florence, Rome, Pompeii, Sorrento, Capri, Naples and other romantic spots before their return to the studio.

The snapshots Susan and Bill take during thier belated honeymoon will be worked into future "Days of Our Lives" scripts and televised so that their fans can vicariously enjoy their travels.

Always ebullient Ross Hunter is typically enthusiatic about "They Moneychangers," the big star-packed drama he's producing for NBC-TV, but his enthusiasm peaks when he talks about Susan Flannery, the soap opera alumna, whom he cast in a principal role.

"I guess I was taking a chance casting her in a picture with a multimillion dollar budget," Ross admits. "'The Moneychangers' probably has the biggest budget in the history of television.

"But I'd seen Susan in 'The Towering Inferno' and though her part in that wasn't large, I thought she was marvelous.

"She has the qualities of a Madeleine Carroll and a Pat Neal and an Ingrid Bergman.

ROLLING STONE

Record Reviews

By DAVE MARCH

BOB DYLAN
. . . It's better in concert

BOB DYLAN: "Hard Rain"

The soundtrack from the television program offers ample opportunity to be grateful that the original show didn't last long enough for analysis. The songs are mostly the right ones, particularly those drawn from the great middle portion of Dylan's career, although Mozambique, the best song on the show, is omitted here. Memphis Blues Again and One Too Many Mornings work in their way, I guess. But Dylan's spontaneous self-mockery doesn't bear up as well under repeated listening as it does in the transient environment of a concert. Similarly, while the band has enough thump for a show, on record they seem a better bunch of gypsies than musical accompanists. It's jarring to hear Dylan as you've wanted him — the pure rock and roller, which is what he mostly is here — and realize that he's no better than average at it. But then, being thrown for a loss by this guy is no big news. The real question is when the deluge of LPs and public appearances ceases — and only he knows the answer.

RORY GALLAGHER: "Calling Card"

Still the best white blues guitarist, Gallagher plays with all the fire and none of the discipline of the form at its best. There are no distinguished songs here, since all the cuts rely on simple 122-bar blues riffs played on slide guitar ad interspersed with Gallagher's throaty shouts — but like Elmore James doing an Irish jig, this is fun all the way. The title that sums it up is Jackknife Beat, which is worth investigating as a starting place — if you like it, he has made a half-dozen albums in the same vein.

"ROBBIN THOMPSON"

An American Song Festival winner who used to play with Bruce Springsteen, Thompson's not as mediocre as his debut LP makes him seem. A good hard rock song, Dream on Melinda, is lost in a wash of inappropriate pedal steel banality. The culprit seems to be the hackneyed production of Jim Mason, who has a formula that reached its greatest hits with Firefall, another second-rate effort.

"BURTON CUMMINGS"

CBS now controls about 20 per cent of the American record market, exceeded only by the Warner group. Portrait is a third label to go with Columbia and Epic, in an attempt to become No. 1. As such, its first release is a real embarrassment: Cummings, the former lead singer of the Canadian pop group Guess Who, and producer Richard Perry, the most expensive in the world, have turned out an album whose contemporary moment is a big band reworking of 'You Ain't Seen Nothing Yet,' originally done by the Guess Who's Canadian competition, BTO. That's the good part. The rest is really bad.

ROBERT PALMER: "Some People Can Do What They Like"

Some people are trying to convince us that Palmer is a great white soul singer. These people must not have heard Rod Stewart, Southside Johnny or Van Morrison in a couple of years. Hokum.

The Stars of Yesterday

Where Are They Today?

HOLLYWOOD — "The next time you see Randolph Scott, tell him you talked with the man who helped make him a star," Clarence Muse recommended.

Muse, a white-bearded black actor who appeared in the second all-talking picture, "Hearts of Dixie," and who claims to have played "Dr. Jekyl and Mr. Hyde" on stage in "white face," was sitting beside a car wash in downtown Los Angeles, awaiting his next scene in a Universal movie called "Car Wash."

He graduated from Dickerson School of Law in 1911 with a degree in international law but never seriously pursued a legal career.

Instead, Muse got into vaudeville, then founded the famed Lafayette Players of Harlem with which he was a star performer. As a result, he'd built a considerable reputation as an actor before William Fox recruited him in 1930 for "Hearts of Dixie."

Among Muse's other screen credits are "Night and Day," "The Shadow of a Doubt," "Porgy and Bess" and "Way Down South," which he choreographed and which was based on a screenplay he'd coauthored and in which he starred.

But what does all this have to do with Randolph Scott?

"I was in a play called 'Under the Virginia Moon' and I wrote a song for it called 'When It's Sleepy Time Down South,'" he explained.

"Well, because of that song, the young man who was the lead in the play got a job at Paramount. That was Scott, and he's never looked back since then.

"The reason I wrote that song," Muse continued, "was that Scott had a scene he did on a lawn. He was young, and he wasn't very good.

"To get right down to it, he was so bad that the director said, 'That young man is good-looking, but he's awful. This scene needs something to help him out.'

"I'd been thinking that the show had the wrong name, that it should have been called 'When It's Sleepy Time Down South,' because that was its theme.

"So I suggested, 'Suppose we had a theme song?

"That's how I wrote the song which has become a standard. And it did so much for the show that Paramount gave Scott a contract.

"That's why I say for you to tell him that you talked with the man who made him a star."

Though, according to Muse, "When It's Sleepy Time Down South" gave Scott's career a tremendous upward shove, he wasn't the one who sang it.

"I sang the song," the actor-songwriter disclosed. "I used to get six and seven encores. Every performance, I stopped the show.

"A fellow who had a breakfast club program on radio was impressed by the song. So it sort of went in and out for about seven years until a big bandleader — I can't remember his name — oh, yes, Paul Whiteman — picked it up. And that's how it became a standard. 'When It's Sleepy Time Down South' swept the nation.

CLARENCE MUSE
. . . gave Randolph Scott a start

"I wrote it in 1933, and it's done so well that to this good day, if I'm not working, I still have no worries."

Recalling "Hearts of Dixie," the second all-talkie, Muse noted that he had the lead and was supported by Step 'n' Fetchit.

"He's a very clever man," he said of his former colleague. "In one year, he made more money than I ever heard of an actor making. He made $1.5 million. He's in Chicago now and up to everything."

When he's not acting, he's writing his autobiography and collaborating with Alex Laszlo on "Quorum Eroticum," an anthology of centuries-old love music.

"People always ask me when I'm going to retire," Muse mused, "and I tell them I have retired, 30 years ago."

'Matter of Time' Falls Flat

By DAVID STERRITT

The cast and credits of A Matter of Time read like a Hollywood dream.

Heading the list is the fabulous Minnelli family — Liza with a "z" and Vincente with an "e" — one of the hottest young stars and one of the grandest old filmmakers in the movies, artistically united for the first time.

The co-star is Ingrid Bergman, a classic star and as fresh as ever. Charles Boyer guest-stars, and Fernando Rey makes a small appearance. There are songs by Liza's Cabaret composers, costumes by Oscar-winner cinematography by Geoffrey Unsworth . . .

It sounds like what it is, an honest attempt to create "the Tiffany of romantic motion pictures." Yet, alas, these noble plans have gone astray. A Matter of Time reflects all too well the atmosphere of its main setting, an aging Roman hotel: faded charm, ersatz opulence, a glory that might have been but certainly isn't now.

The plot centres on a bright-eyed 19-year-old who moves to the big city and becomes a chambermaid. In a seedy old hotel she meets the Contessa, a dotty old woman whose onetime sparkle still peaks occasionally from the dusty folds of her now-tacky life.

The Contessa reminisces, relives, and rehashes past happiness, dressing up the girl in her old clothes in displays of crazy generosity, then sneaking off to sell the last of her jewels to pay the rent for another week or so.

Things get brighter for the girl, who stumble onto a movie career; but the Contessa goes downhill until a bleary-eyed finale that could coax tears from a Roman cobblestone.

INGRID BERGMAN

Miss Bergman is the best thing about A Matter of Time. She hams it up deliciously, spouting the nutty lines of John Gay's screenplay with a dead pan lightened by just a touch of mischievousness. And, naturally, she's lovely, even behind the Contessa's spooky makeup.

Miss Minnelli hasn't nearly so much good material — curiously, since her father put the movie together and seems to be trying to look after her best on-screen interests.

She sings her three songs strongly, and does lots of wide-eyed mugging, and wears plenty of fancy outfits, but never becomes more than Miss Bergman's second-banana. Bquer and Rey are wasted in their tiny roles.

Vincente Minnelli has directed some of the best-loved films of all time, including An American in Paris, The Bad and the Beautiful, The Band Wagon and on and on.

He never brings his talent together in A Matter of Time however. The look of the movie is choppy and sometimes cheap; some episodes have been cut (perhaps after the fact) into inconsistency: Rome herself looks stale.

Technical problems hurt, too. The voice redubbing, for example, sounds like it was phoned in from Australia.

Shooting Rapids of Quebec Politics

By WALTER YOUNG

The separatist movement in Quebec lacked credibility until Rene Levesque left the Liberal party to take up the cause. As the minister who brought about the creation of Hydro Quebec — a feat which, incidentally, Pierre Trudeau described in 1962 as "unproductive and expensive" — and later led the fight with Ottawa over the control of the family allowance scheme, he was the one provincial politician who combined success with a growing commitment to the ideals of separatism.

Two elections later, with close to one-third of the electorate behind his Parti Quebecois, he could emerge after the present campaign as premier of Quebec. Peter Desbarats and his publishers must be delighted with their timing and that of Premier Bourassa. Win or lose, a book about Rene Levesque at this juncture is bound to succeed, even if it happens to be something less than perfect.

With a curiously picaresque and at times breathless style, Desbarats tries to breathe life into past events in this portrait of Levesque. His subject never quite makes it out of the prose thicket, but enough is visible to form some judgments about the man.

One is that Levesque is not likely to make a good premier. He is still the leader of his flock, but he is tired. Even when first in politics his staying power was limited. Desbarats makes the point that Levesque quickly lost interest in administration after a few months. His style is to pursue the grand design, the major triumph. The small change of politics — the endless negotiation, the necessary compromise and the pursuit of trivia — holds no interest for him. And while the grand design must be a leader's principal stock in trade (God knows, few of our leaders at any level: local, provincial, federal, have any such design), the administrative capacity must be there as well.

RENE LEVESQUE . . . a charismatic figure

As an almost archetypal charismatic figure, Levesque is a formidable opponent on the hustings. In the cabinet room in Quebec or Ottawa political sex appeal is more a liability. His capacity as a negotiator is given short shrift in this biography, especially should the other side in a Quebec-Ottawa confrontation be Pierre Trudeau. Although part of a group including Andre Laurendeau, Gerard Pelletier and Jean Marchand that met regularly in the sixties to talk about Quebec affairs, Levesque and Trudeau parted with a heavy mutual distaste for each other; Trudeau because he mistrusted Levesque's emotionalism, Levesque because he detested Trudeau's skeptical lack of commitment.

It is interesting, however, to speculate on subsequent events should the P.Q. emerge victorious in Quebec. How would this affect the fortunes of the federal Liberals and Tories? A P.Q. win might be the answer to Trudeau's problems, enabling him once again to robe himself as Canada's saviour. On the other hand, the electorate may have tired of what many see as unrewarding episodes in the saga of placating Quebec, and would prefer a Western prime minister who would drive a hard bargain with any separating Quebec. The latter position assumes a serious misreading of the main stream of Tory policy in this matter, but it is always dangerous to expect the public to be accurate about politics.

If Levesque does win, it will be less a victory of design, even though he has tried to steer his party into the calmer waters of negotiated nationalism, and more the result of Levesque's willingness to shoot the rapids of Quebec politics, ignoring the back eddies, while the speed and the roar of events fuel his resolve. But the charismatic figure soon wearies of the flat stretches and grows impatient with colleagues who would rather portage.

Desbarats writes of Levesque:

"He doesn't just get discouraged when things go wrong. He dies for a while, and waits for some external event to resurrect him." One way or the other, then, this provincial election will be Levesque's deliverance.

For the Quebec voter who did not vote P.Q. last time but is not a committed Bourassa Liberal, what kind of alternative does Levesque offer? His attempts at reassurance notwithstanding, will those voters who are disenchanted with Bourassa because of Bill 22 feel happier with a neo-separatist Parti Quebecois in power? Certainly those who are critical of Bourassa's failure to enforce the bill effectively will move left. Those who want their children to learn English will probably prefer the devil they know. And for the 25 per cent or so Anglophone vote in Quebec the Ottawa parachute battalion led by Jean Marchand — Levesque's old university chum — will doubtless reassure them that federalism lives.

Win or lose, what Levesque has achieved is significant. Both for Quebec and for the rest of Canada he has given the separatist option credibility and visibility and has in that way served to keep before us the need for new solutions to the oldest problem in our politics. At a time when the central issues seem doomed to disappear in a welter of ignorant, red-neck, backwoods froth, the kind typified by some local columnists and most open-line broadcasters, that service is one that any conscientious Canadian must appreciate.

The moment of truth is at hand. Your faithful reviewer has a confession to make. I'd be tempted to waffle my way around it if I didn't feel that you, dear reader, deserve the truth, and I can only hope that you're ready for it. All set? Then here goes: I confess that I think Charlie Farquharson is funny.

Not all the time, and not on all subjects, but funny nevertheless. The mind boggles at imagining what the mental machinery of Don Harron, who created Charlie, must be like, but it's a sure bet that it's hyperactive and built to last. Charlie's latest offering, his KORN Allmynack, follows his Histry and Jogfree of Canada and it's at least as funny as his Histry and probably an improvement on Jogfree.

K O R N Allmynack is written for North American readers rather than specifically for Canadians, however, which reduces Charlie's topical and satiric content to a mish-mash of cross-border references that will probably confuse his U.S. readership and annoy everyone else. In a way, the almanac format does help to offset this criticism, as it compensates for the loss of general topicality by providing particular topicality in the form of "Horrorscopes". The problem here, though, is that Charlie's "Horrorscopes" are the dullest things in the Allmynack's 128 pages. ("Leeyos like to flash a lot. Plads, stripes, florrid patterns, and when they buy new clothes they tend to see red. When drest they shud not have sich loud clothes neer a hospiddle zone." And so on, for at least 24 pages worth of "Assterlogical" information, during which Charlie's humor is as hit or miss as his spelling.)

Other low (and I mean low!) points include quaintly illustrated ads for products such as Truax's Electro Magnetic Suspense Belt — cures "spinal irritations, general debility, seminal weaknesses and female complaints" — and a Life Size Doll that's "an exact replica of an old hand-painted French maid."

But things improve with 12 monthly features titled "Charlie's Daly Diaree," followed by reflections on everything from gardens ("if you wanna be ornamental in yer own garden, I suggest you get a good sunburn down in Florrider, come back, stand on one laig, bare as a bird on yer front lawn, and people will think you are a pink flamingo") to going "on the Metrecal" ("the guvement's had no luck in bringin down wages and prices, so insted they give you cut-rate tempachers. Now on accounta the gas shortedge, speed limits is gonna be upped th' otherway. Instedda plod-din along at fifty mile an hour, you'll be terracin thru at a hundred kill-yer-meters. Won't be any faster, you mind, but you'll be thinkin yer gittin more miledge fer yer money.")

CHARLIE . . . grinding the corn

Other short pieces include Farquaharsian thoughts on The Curing and Tanning of Kids ("getting yer famly's goat"), Easter ("the wife is second mezzanine in the choir soprannas") Starting Rite with Sheep ("Try a sheep dip at yer next party") and Lovin' Marridge ("the wife and I got engaged in June, thus ending a friendship which had begun in kindygarden").

The night I read Charlie's Allmynack while the rest of the family tried to watch TV was a truly hilarious occasion. I'd read a page, struggle with the temptation to read from it aloud, then give up on a lost cause and quote: "Jan. 3: Son rises at 9:30 a.m. Sets around the house all day." To this interruption there'd be a patient, detached and muttered response all round.

After a few minutes of heroic restraint I'd begin again: "March 2: More Wind. One of our chickens with her back to it laid the same aig six times." More muttering, not quite so detached this time. Recklessly, I pursued my advantage: "March 14: Eggs down agin. Put sine in henhouse, "A aig a day keeps Kernel Sandy away." "May 8. Wife wants a new dishwahser. I ast her what I was doin' wrong."

When they began to giggle I knew it was all over. "May 11: Our cow give berth to quadrupeds. Must phone Bull of the Month club", I threw at them. Even "May 23' I sneezed after eatin a mouthful sponge cake. Wife hadda cleen the hole house. May 24: Wife buys plastick cover to keep over me wen I'm not in use", got what amounted to an ovation.

So keep 'em coming, Charlie. You're living proof that when it comes to solid entertainment TV is still not much more than a convenient substitute for something better

A Nasty Piece of Work

Phew! The Diaries of Evelyn Waugh run to 793 pages and I have read every single word, including the footnotes, which appear on almost every page. I don't ask for a medal for gallantry beyond the call of duty but I do crave sympathy for I cannot recall any book that has irritated and bored me more, not even the biography of the same Waugh, by Christopher Sykes, which I slogged my way through earlier this year.

Evelyn Waugh was a highly competent novelist but his work was insubstantial and even during his lifetime (he died in 1966) he was more noted for his cantankerousness and his bilious statements about people and events than he was for his books.

It is not surprising, therefore, that his diaries, which he kept almost continuously from the age of seven until a year before his death, should also lack solidity and substance.

In a newspaper article of 1930 he wrote, "Nobody wants to read other people's reflections on life and religion and politics, but the routine of their day, properly recorded, is always interesting."

In the light of the diaries this sweeping statement simply meant that Waugh placed himself at the centre of the universe and it never entered his head to meditate about anything that didn't have him as producer, director and star.

Waugh was a thoroughly nasty piece of work, and for this his father was at least partially to blame. Waugh pere, a nobody, was a self-styled man of letters who dabbled in writing, did a little editing, and ended up as managing director of a publishing house. A poseur, he delighted in speaking to public gatherings and he carried his performance into his domestic life where he was always on stage, always acting.

His inner insecurity manifested itself outwardly by ostentation — extra large cigars, excessive entertaining, etc. — chiefly in the form of sending Evelyn to an expensive boarding school, and later to Oxford, and encouraging his expensive tastes and countenancing his being perennially in debt.

The result of these early influences was that for the remainder of his life Evelyn believed himself to be a member of the aristocracy and, incessantly debt-plagued, continued to live in the manner to which he had accustomed himself.

Contrary to Evelyn Waugh's belief, quoted above, a good diary is of value to future generations as social history only when it concerns itself chiefly with people's reactions to political trends. This is the case with such diaries as those of Samuel Pepys, John Evelyn, Fanny Burney and, in our day, Harold Nicolson.

Waugh's diaries certainly reflect a way of life, and action and reaction of himself and his circle to events from the mid-1920s to the mid-1960s, but his circle was a small one which led an artificial existence, concerning itself wholly with self-indulgences and amoral conduct more in tune with the court of Louis XIV than with the stark realities of modern Britain.

WAUGH

The above applies to the diaries of 1924-28, of 1930-39, and from 1945 to the end. The entries record ad nauseum his heavy drinking (he was drunk most days) with his friends at clubs and parties, and the malicious gossip joyously indulged in by his obnoxious circle.

That and his constant preoccupation with Roman Catholicism to which he was a convert.

Rarely are we made privy to his method of working, and never do we glimpse the real world beyond the artificial confines of the Waugh menagerie. There are servants for use and abuse, and there are his pet hates — Jews and blacks, the latter always referred to as "niggers," including Paul Robeson and Florence Mills.

Waugh was a snob in the strict dictionary definition of the world. That's bad enough, but worse from the reader's point of view was his enjoyment at being invidious, and to score points he would exaggerate, and often lie deliberately, which of course makes all his statements suspect.

This unreliability is repeatedly emphasized in footnotes, several of which contain extracts from letters to editor Michael Davie from Waugh's victims, who are at pains to set the record straight. This is particularly the case in the wartime diaries, which are quite simply preposterous as they deal solely with the war as it affected Lieut. Evelyn Waugh.

Despite the fact that he pulled social strings to obtain choice jobs (the strings extended to Mountbatten and the prime minister, the latter through Waugh's intimacy with the equally obnoxious, equally drunken Randolph Churchill) he was unemployed during most of the war because fellow officers found him insufferable and he was shunted around in England and granted frequent leaves to get rid of him.

The only time he saw action was during a brief sojourn in Crete. He is scathingly critical about everyone, including the gallant General Freyberg. He infers — and sometimes states categorically — that all ranks were cowardly, conveniently ignoring the fact that most of the troops on Crete had suffered through retreat and evacuation from Greece, had had little sleep for weeks and were at the end of their tether.

The only redeeming feature of this book is the 142-page section devoted to The Lancing Diary. So far as is known this is the only readable diary kept over an extended period by an English public (private) schoolboy.

As you would expect it is precocious. One occasionally glimpses the boy as a normal boy, and this is refreshing, but mainly it is the writing of a young prig — but a prig with an unusual mind. Here are three examples:

On the first Armistice Day: "If people have lost sons and fathers they should think of them whenever the grass is green, not for two minutes on the anniversary of a disgraceful day of national hysteria."

On politics: "The more I see of politics the more dishonest and fascinating they appear."

The 17-year-old boy who recorded those thoughts had decided possibilities and, to some extent, these were fulfilled by his subsequent successful novels. But even these were marred by malice and gross exaggeration.

But it is the adult diaries which accurately reflect Waugh's character and these show him to have been a shallow, contemptible little man with an exaggerated respect for social position and wealth, a disposition to be ashamed of socially inferior connections and a tendency to judge merit by externals.

It follows that the diairies of such a person are not worth the paper they are printed on, and my reading of them confirmed this.

From Rags to Riches: A Hollywood Saga

By JUDITH BURKETT

America loves nothing better than a rags-to-riches success story, especially when it is trimmed with Hollywood tinsel. The familiar figure of Ricky Ricardo playing Cuban straight-man to a scatter-brained Lucy was already halfway there in a 30-year climb to fame and fortune.

Desiderio Alberto Arnaz y de Acha was far from poor when he was born on March 2, 1917, in Santiago de Cuba, the son of the mayor. The elder Arnaz, young, respected and influential, was popularly elected a senator under President Machado in the early 30s. But in 1933 a Communist-inspired mini-revolution overthrew the "Machadistas" and angry mobs indiscriminately destroyed the property of anyone connected with the Machado regime. The terrifying, blind violence of the mob, the same people who had elected his father, etched its vicious image into the mind of the young Desiderio. Their lives in ruins, father and son fled the country.

Newly penniless and ill-equipped by upbringing to deal with poverty, Desi and his father battled hunger, rats and the vagaries of the English language in Miami. After long months of living in a warehouse, working at whatever he could, Desi, as a not untalented ballad singer, joined a trio which earned a pittance serenading customers in Miami nightclubs. One night the audience included Latin band leader Xavier Cugat, and the course of Desi's life began its long upswing to the distant top.

Cugat's talents as a musician were matched only by his hard-headedness as a businessman. The eager Desi learned both arts working for Cugat in New York for $25 a week. But a new turn of fortunes was not far away. Back in Miami, as an act of desperation to salvage a disastrous New Year's band engagement, Desi introduced the Conga, and, of course, the Conga line. The time was right, the craze was on and Desi's independent career in show biz was launched with a very big bang.

In 1939, while playing the male lead in RKO's forgettable "Too Many Girls," Desi fell in love with his leading lady and, after a tempestuous courtship, on November 30, 1940, Lucille Ball became Mrs. Desi Arnaz. The happy couple bought a ranch house in what was then open countryside near Hollywood and named it, of course, Desilu.

During the 40s, the era of the Big Bands, Desi's Latin band enjoyed considerable success, playing lengthy engagements at the Copacabana and around the country. But all this activity kept him away from home and Lucy and in 1944 Lucy sued for divorce. She even went through with it, for the sake of the press, but was home with Desi the same night, rendering the decree null and void.

The adverse effect which separation had on their marriage was to play a key role in the development of television. At this point in television history, programs were always shot live, on one coast or the other, with a kinescope of the program being sent to the opposite coast for the viewers there. There were no satellites or cable in those dim, distant days. However, the quality of kinescope was poor and a sponsor based, say, in New York would naturally want his home audience to have the best version.

The idea for I Love Lucy was bought by Philip Morris, based in New York. But Lucy was making films in Hollywood and both she and Desi were apprehensive about what commuting and separation might do to their stormy marriage. On the spur of the moment, on the telephone to the sponsor, Desi blurted out a sudden inspiration . . . they would film the show, and send the New York network filmed episodes to be aired at their leisure. It is the obvious things in life which require genius to point them out.

There was a catch, however. Lucy was not at their best without an audience. Fine. They would film it in front of a live audience. It had never been done before and for good reason. The cameras would have to be stationary and there would have to be three of them. Editing would be a nightmare. Lighting techniques would have to be invented, sound techniques refined. A stage had to be designed in such a way that the audience had an unobstructed view of the proceedings. Even fire and sanitary regulations, necessitated by the presence of the audience, presented problems. But the show was on and its instantaneous success was a surprise to no-one more than Desi and Lucy themselves. The industry was revolutionized and the rest is history.

Since Desilu owned the only equipment available for filming live productions and had the only technicians with the knowledge of the process, other producers came to them with ideas for television series and Desilu's stock rose at a breakneck pace. Their most famous and lasting series after the Lucy shows is probably The Untouchables, with Robert Stack a last-minute replacement for Van Johnson. From 1959 to 1963, The Untouchables featured stars old and new, including such now more familar faces as Peter Falk, Telly Savalas, Jack Klugman, Charles Bronson and Robert Redford.

ARNAZ

But Desilu got too big. In some ways, success was much worse than the poverty of the early 30s. The strain on the marriage was too much and in 1960 Desi and Lucy were divorced.

The story ends here, the end of an era. It is the story of the making of the life of an ordinary man with extraordinary talent and tenacity. Desi did not trust his own ability with English; "A Book" is a transcription of many hours of taped rememberings and thoughts, and thus reads like a fascinating chat over numerous cups of coffee. The language is not literary; rather it is real, frank and human. One is left with the impression that these same words describe the man.

Following Chains to African Heritage

By JULIAN REID

Kunta Kinte was just 16 the night he ventured foolhardily out beyond the palisade of his native village, Juffure, and was set upon by a marauding party of "toubob" — the dread foreign slavers, their skins repulsively pale: "the color of a toad's underbelly." Kunta was gagged, bound, beaten, then blindfolded and hobbled. Later, his back raw from repeated lashings and the still-smarting impress of his captors' branding-iron, he was herded in chains into the noisome hold of the slaveship Lord Ligonier."

The year, in the pagan toubob calendar, was 1767. After a hellish three-months' voyage, Kunta was lashed ashore at Annapolis, Maryland, and auctioned off to a Virginia planter. The rest of his days he dragged out in slavery, a black-skinned stranger in the white man's land.

His daugher, Kizzy, was born a slave; so was her mulatto son, "Chicken George." But George's son, Tom, was destined to die free — after the Civil War, he and his family moved off the old plantation to "the promised land" of western Tennessee. In freedom Tom prospered, and his daughter Cynthia begat another daughter, Bertha, who grew up to marry a striving young agronomist named Simon Haley.

Young Alex Haley grew up amid a tantalizing buzz of "snatches and patches of the long, cumulative family narrative that had been passed down across the generations" — a narrative stretching all the way back to the legendary figure of "the African," as Alex's great-great-great-great-grandfather Kunta was known to his descendants. Forty years later those legends still tantalized Haley. He resolved to seek out the truth about his half-remembered ancestry.

A decade's investigations led him at last to the lush, hot savannahs of The Gambia, in East Africa. There he was driven to the tiny village of Juffure, little changed over the two centuries since his forefather's unwilling departure, and introduced to a wizened old "griot" — one of the legendary chroniclers of his people, "living, walking archives of oral history" passed proudly down the centuries.

"We have been told by the forefathers," the griot announced, "that there are many of us from this place who are in exile in that place called America." Then, through a translator, the two exchanged stories. Their accounts dovetailed perfectly. Haley's new-found sixth cousins crowded about him with cries of "Meester Kinte! Meester Kinte!" The men — Moslems, like their forebears — led him to their mosque. They knelt and prayed. Afterward, that prayer was translated for Haley's benefit: "Praise be to Allah for one long lost from us whom Allah has returned!"

Such was the genesis of Roots, Alex Haley's lengthy chronicle of the generations separating him from his African birthright. The book is fictionalized history, blending family traditions, documentary researches, and the author's informed and empathetic imagination in an ambitious attempt to re-create the long years of blind hope amidst suffering, of determination amid despair, which shaped the living heritage out of which he was born.

It is a noble theme, flawed in the execution. The narrative is replete with the lapses to be expected from a first novelist, along with many characteristic symptoms of overswollen, prepackaged best-sellerdom. In particular, Haley the novelist frequently falls victim to Haley the researcher, who insists on cramming tidbits of unassimilated historical material into blatantly contrived conversations between his hapless characters.

Yet, for all its faults, Roots deserves the wide circulation it is predestined to achieve. Awkward as it sometimes is, Haley's portrait of the ill-starred Kunta Kinte, which occupies more than half the book, is moving and powerfully authentic — so much so that it is easy to excuse the way the remaining chapters wind inexorably down into anti-climax, despite some vivid scenes and the raffishly improper appeal of Kunta's scapegrace grandson, the sporty "Chicken Joe."

At his best, Haley is a compelling story-teller and, for white readers, the appeal of Roots hangs on that fact. For blacks, it strikes deeper. As the first black American writer to retrace his ancestry to his free African forebears, Alex Haley has succeeded in completing a symbolic pilgrimage into the very soul of his people's collective identity.

Perhaps no descendant of the all-mastering "toubob" can truly appreciate what it means to belong to a race that has been systematically degraded and dehumanized, deliberately stripped of its ancestral culture, its innate dignity, and its native birthright. Yet, for all of us, the real significance of spiritual roots is vividly captured in Haley's account of the "manhood training" young Kunta underwent when he was ten.

Its climax came as Kunta listened to an old griot recounting the proud history of his tribe. Afterwards, he sat apart, reflecting on all he had heard. "The past seemed one with the present, the present with the future; the dead with the living and those yet to be born; he himself with his family, his mates, his village, his tribe, his Africa; the world of man with the world of animals and growing things — they all lived with Allah. Kunta felt very small, yet very large. Perhaps, he thought, this is what it means to become a man."

ROOTS, by Alex Haley. Doubleday. $14.50.

Alchemy to Zen, Mysticism Bared

"Mysticism" and "mystical" are two of the most widely misused words in our language. In fact, real mysticism is anything but synonymous with woolly-minded religiosity. Instead, the term embraces a multiplicity of philosophies and life-styles, which have in common their basis in the so-called "mystical state" — the direct experience of losing one's self in something indescribably greater than oneself, a transcendent Something which the mystic usually but not invariably indentifies with God.

The full range and variety of mystical experience and thought are splendidly captured in John Ferguson's An Illustrated Encyclopedia of Mysticism and the Mystery Religions. Here are brief but illuminating articles on the major mystical disciplines, from Alchemy to Zen; on great individual mystics, like Lao-Tzu and Saint Teresa; and on such central themes and images of world mysticism as the Beatific Vision and the Dark Night of the Soul.

As a first introduction, I recommend something more basic — William James' classic, The Varieties of Religious Experience, perhaps, or F. C. Happold's Mysticism: A Study and An Anthology. But for the initiate who wishes to explore the subject more deeply, I can think of no better starting-place than Ferguson's volume. This is one of those rare reference-books which invites not merely casual sampling; it deserves to be read straight through, from cover to cover, as I read it. If you are at all like me, you will find that it opens doors. — J. R.
